Three Juveniles Confess Making Bomb Threat Calls

THREE East Stroudsburg Area Joint High School students confessed yesterday to police that they turned in the "bomb scare" telephone call to the high school Wednesday morning.

The boys told police they made the call from the Norris Restaurant, State and E. Broad Sts. in the borough, but could give no reason for thinking of the scheme.

They told East Stroudsburg Police Chief Travis Seese they did not make the call Tuesday night to the Grand Theatre, nor did they get the idea for Wednesday's call from the story about the theatre call.

All Admit Blame

Spliting the blame three ways, the boys said one supplied the dime for the call, one looked up the number while the third actually made the call.

The boy making the call had been expelled for the day from the school, the only one with any kind of excuse for being out of school. The other two had made up their minds to skip school that day the night before, it was reported.

Following a morning session of querying the three, Seese then continued questioning them at 1 p.m. yesterday and they made their confession at that time.

Denied at First

When he asked one of the boys during an earlier session if "he knew who made the call," Seese said he received a negative answer.

When asked yesterday, however, why he had not admitted it earlier, the youth said he had not been asked directly if he had made the phone call.

The trio denied having anything to do with the call Wednesday to the General Hospital.

Police are continuing to investigate this latter call.

The three—two sophomores and a senior—are being held in custody pending disposition of the case by Probation Officer Henry McCool. Two of the boys are 15 and the third is 17 years old.

Three Flee Prison At Jim Thorpe

JIM THORPE — Three prisoners in Carbon County Prison here overpowered a jailer, smashed the lock on the front door and escaped about 8:55 p.m. yesterday.

State Police at Lehighton identified them as Carl Edgar Shindler, Lehighton; David Kenneth Brown, Jim Thorpe, and Marvin LeRoy Hartranft, Walnutport.

They tricked a guard into entering the cell block, police said. One of the prisoners asked Daniel McLean, 67, for a light bulb. When McLean brought one, he was overpowered by the three.

Troopers said Hart and Brown were serving time on burglary charges, while Shindler was in on moral charges.

Israel Views Nasser Actions With Alarm

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—Israel told the United Nations Thursday it views recent actions by President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic as open incitement to war. Israel added that the situation had reached dangerous dimensions.

The Israeli statement was issued amid reports from the Middle East of increasing troop movements by Israel and both the Egyptian and Syrian parts of the UAR near the tense border areas.

Israel delivered its alarm in a letter addressed to British Ambassador Sir Pierson Dixon, February president of the UN Security Council.

61 Die In Rio Plane Collision, Another 32 In Shannon Crash

Big Airliner Crashes On N. Y. Flight

SHANNON, Ireland (AP)—An Italian airliner with 52 persons aboard crashed into a cemetery and exploded here early Friday just after taking off for New York. Eyewitnesses said not more than 20 persons — and probably fewer—survived.

A Shannon priest said the Al Italia DC7 hit the wall of the cemetery near the airport, shearing the wheels off the craft.

Tombstones Broken

A line of tombstones was broken and the plane left a mile-long trial of fire across a pasture.

Most of the survivors were burned badly on their faces and limbs, airport officials said.

The plane was on a flight from Naples and Rome to New York and was said to be carrying mostly Italians and Americans.

Aboard were 40 passengers and a crew of 12.

The Shannon priest, the Rev. Thomas Comerford, was one of the first to reach the scene.

Heard Screams

"I heard crying and screaming as if people were being burned to death," he said. "It was horrible. One old man who said he was a Capuchin monk staggered out badly burned. He said most of the people aboard were Catholics and he asked that they should be given the last rites.

"I took the man's passport," the priest said, "and found his name was Giuseppi Cacioli with a forwarding address at Gunhill Road, Bronx, 67. The passport had an Italian address which looked like Cappuccili, Aresso. It showed he was 52 years old." (the Bronx is one of New York City's five boroughs).

Bodies Scattered

"There were bodies scattered all over the field," the priest went on.

"People were mixed up with the remains of sheep the plane had killed. Most of the bodies were horribly mutilated.

"People were screaming, sheep were crying and dogs were barking.

"It was like a scene from hell."

A spokesman for Al Italia in Rome said all the passengers boarded the plane in Italy.

Rescue and fire fighting teams raced to the scene of the crash and battled the flames with foam equipment. Eyewitnesses said the heat from the burning plane was terrific.

"It seemed as if the petrol tanks must have gone up with devastating force," said one person at the scene. "How anyone survived is a miracle to me."

Five survivors were rushed to a hospital at Limercik.

U. S. Navy Band Plane Disaster Chills Ike Trip

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—A U. S. Navy plane and a Brazilian airliner with a total of 64 persons aboard collided over Rio de Janeiro's bay in an overcast Thursday.

Late Thursday night 61 were unaccounted for and presumed dead. Both planes broke into pieces and sank in the sea within view of horrified Rio spectators.

The disaster wiped out a highly talented section of the U. S. Navy band-orchestra that was to have played here for the touring President Eisenhower.

Three Survivors

When rescue operations were halted at nightfall only three survivors had been found among the total 64 in the two planes.

The Defense Department in Washington listed 19 musicians, 7 plane crew members, 7 members of an antisubmarine group, and 2 other plane passengers as missing a total of 35. Three men saved were part of the antisubmarine group.

The disaster cast a pall of tragedy over Eisenhower's visit to Brazil.

With some of the top talent from the Navy band and orchestra the plane carried a group of U. S. antisubmarine men who had been in Argentina trying to help the Argentine Navy check out the rumored presence of an alien submarine. The sub hunt was a dud.

Comfort Survivors

The bandsmen, who formed an orchestra group, were to have played at a dinner Eisenhower was giving Thursday night for Brazilian President Juscelino Kubitschek.

Many members of the famed band are known personally to Eisenhower. The President and Kubitschek hurried to a hospital to comfort the survivors.

James C. Hagerty, presidential press secretary, told newsmen the President "feels terrible about this tragic accident," but will go ahead with his South American tour.

The Navy plane, a four-engine R6D, was flying to Rio De Janeiro from Buenos Aires. The Defense Department in Washington said it carried 38 persons. The U. S. Embassy here had said earlier there were 44 persons aboard—the bandsmen, crewmen and members of the antisubmarine team.

26 On Board

The commercial airliner was a two-engine plane belonging to Real Airlines. The company said it carried 22 passengers, including an infant, and a crew of 4.

One eyewitness to the disaster was David B. Richardson, noted ex-war correspondent and South American regional editor for the magazine U. S. News and World Report. He was in a taxi circling Guanabara Bay.

"I happened to glance up at Sugar Loaf Mountain and noticed it was shrouded in thick fog," Richardson said. "Just at that moment a big four-engine plane—or what was left of it—came tumbling out of the fog.

"It spiraled crazily. The tail and rear section were missing. From the chopped-off fuselage a whole array of objects came spilling out as if it were a sort of ghastly cornucopia. I thought I saw a human figure in the falling debris.

Bizarre Sight

"The plane hit the water with a splash that shot a sheet of white spray into the air. Then came the bizarre sight of the plane's tail section gliding slowly downward in a slow spiral until it fell gently into the bay. Other objects fell at the same time.

"Then the scene was as placid as it was just before that horrible moment."

As darkness fell over the scene, the search for bodies was halted. Buoy markers were put in place to mark the spot until work can be resumed Friday. Rain fell through most of the day.

Half Million Cheer Ike In Sao Paulo

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)—President Eisenhower bared his head to the rain in Sao Paulo Thursday and beamed at the most enthusiastic acclaim he has gotten so far on his South American tour. A half million or more cheered him along drenched, confetti-strewn streets.

A few hours later a pall was cast over his personal triumphs by an aerial tragedy at Rio de Janeiro, the collision of a plane carrying U.S. Navy bandsmen and a Brazilian commercial craft. The musicians were flying in to Rio to appear Thursday night at Eisenhower's U.S. Embassy dinner for President Juscelino Kubitschek of Brazil.

Eisenhower made a flying trip from Rio, Brazil's political capital, to Sao Paulo, the industrial capital, for an activity - packed, six-hour visit that, despite the rain, caused a stir exceeding even that of his official welcome here Wednesday.

Paper and ticker tape fluttered down from windows of that booming city of three million, 220 miles southwest of Rio, in salute to his motorcade. Thousands of students turned out. In the wake of the procession, Eisenhower's admirers surged into Sao Paulo's streets this gray, wet, 70-degree day and blocked traffic—dancing, jumping and shouting in their enthusiams.

The President stood in his bubble - top limousine, flown from Washington to Brazil, throughout the seven-mile drive through Sao Paulo, one of the fastest growing cities in the world.

He donned a raincoat when threatening clouds began to drizzle. The rain was increasing in intensity as he hove into sight of the greatest concentration, at Bandeira Plaza, or Flag Plaza.

To cheers and a fluttering of flags, Eisenhower doffed his gray felt hat, waved and smiled at the umbrella-dotted throng. His hat was sodden in his hand before the drive ended.

Storms Plague Most Of Nation

By The Associated Press

A MASSIVE ice and snow storm borne on stinging cold winds thrashed the Midwest Thursday as violent weather engulfed a vast area from the Mississippi to the Atlantic.

A tornado and squalls struck Florida.

The storm, spawned in the beleaguered Southwest, caused at least 19 deaths as it drove from river to ocean.

Diamonds Worth $500,000 Stolen

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—A Phoenix antique and jewelry shop was robbed of an estimated half million dollars in diamonds and an undetermined amount of cash Thursday.

Two young thieves fled the shop of David Kipnis, importer, after emptying a storeroom vault and leaving a 71-year-old woman clerk bound to a door knob.

Loraine Breeding was alone in the shop when the robbers entered the front door. She thought they were customers.

Sharp, Walter Differ On Manual Testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of the Air Force Dudley C. Sharp said Thursday night the controversial training manual on communism in the churches had been withdrawn "without any determination as to whether the charges were false or true."

Sharp denied he told the House Committee on Un-American Activities during a closed-door session Thursday that all charges in the manual were true.

Rep. Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.), chairman of the committee, announced after the session that Sharp had told the group the Air Force will reissue the manual—without names.

Walter quoted Sharp as saying he had no reason to believe any of the statements in the manual were untrue, but that he thought the Air Force should follow a policy of not naming names.

In a statement issued after his return to the Pentagon, Sharp said: "I have been asked on the basis of news reports whether I testified that all charges in the Air Force training manual withdrawn last week, concerning Communist infiltration in churches, were true.

"The answer is no. I did not so testify."

He then said the manual had been withdrawn without any determination as to the truth or falsity of the charges. He said this was done "because of the general impropriety of treating so important a subject, including the naming of specific individuals and organizations, without thorough review and approval at the highest levels, providing full protection for constitutionally guaranteed rights."

Still Investigating

In a transcript of the committee session, made public by the committee, Sharp was quoted as saying the Air Force is still investigating the production of the manual.

He indicated that its author, Homer H. Hyde, a civilian employe at Lackland Air Force Base in Texas, faced possible disciplinary action.

"I think that people who do not follow their instructions — and it might appear that Mr. Hyde did not — should be certainly reprimanded, if that is the case," Sharp said.

The secretary said the Air Force had laid down guidelines on which the manual was to be based "and it appears the outlines were not followed."

Rep. Donald Jackson (R-Calif.), commented that "some sort of hell will break loose on the floor of the House of Representatives" if the Air Force does reprimand Hyde.

Hyde has defended his booklet as a tool for combating Communist activities.

Snow, Freezing Rain Pelt Pocono Mountains Region

SNOW, followed by freezing rain, pelted the Pocono Mountains yesterday. The storm was accompanied by brilliant flashes of lightning.

Highways were reported slippery in spots, but by 9:30 p.m., the Monroe County office of the State Highways Dept. reported the situation under control.

At that time, the first elements of a crew which included 31 cinder trucks, one truck plowing, two graders plowing, seven loaders, 10 pickups, one shovel and 84 men, were being released for the night.

The plows had been used in the higher elevations of the county, particularly in the vicinity of Mount Pocono.

State Police at area barracks reported snow in the higher areas, but said cinder crews had been over the highways.

There were no reports of accidents up to a late hour.

By The Associated Press

SNOW, SLEET and strong winds whipped through large sections of western Pennsylvania Thursday night.

Roads were reported quite slippery in some parts.

The Weather Bureau forecast a three to six-inch accumulation of snow in northwestern Pennsylvania by Friday morning. The same snowfall was predicted for eastern points in southwestern Pennsylvania.

An electrical storm, unusual in winter, hit the Somerset area Thursday evening. A lightning bolt split a 90-foot high oak tree in half in Somerset. Half the tree fell to earth, narrowly missing the home and auto of Robert J. Glessner. The falling tree tore down wires, cutting off telephone service and electric power to five homes. No one was injured.

Living Costs Decline Further

WASHINGTON (AP) — Living costs dipped again in January for the second straight month. But they remained at a near-record level.

The Labor Department said Thursday lower prices for clothing, new autos, eggs and most meats brought its monthly index down one-tenth of one percent from December.

This put the consumer price index at 125.4 percent of the 1947-49 average. That means it takes $12.54 to buy what a $10 bill would purchase a decade ago.

House Sustains Veto Of Measure

WASHINNGTON (AP)— The House fell 22 votes short Thursday of overriding President Eisenhower's veto of a bill to increase federal spending on water-pollution control.

The roll-call vote was 249-157 in favor of enacting the measure over the President's veto. This was 22 short of the two-thirds needed to override.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla (AP)—America's newest ballistic missile, the Army's "shoot and scoot" Pershing, performed perfectly on its first test flight Thursday.

Passengers Hurt Over Allentown

NEW YORK (AP) — Eight passengers were injured, none seriously, Thursday night when an Eastern Air Lines plane hit a pocket of air turbulence over Allentown, Pa.

The passengers were treated for cuts and bruises after the four-engine Lockheed Electra landed here.

Police said the 64 passengers aboard Flight 400 from St. Louis to New York had just finished dinner when the plane hit the rough air.

Passengers were hurled out of their seats, dishes and trays were flung about and pieces of hand luggage scattered into the aisles.

Commissioners Offer To Boost Foster Home Care Payments

MONROE County Commissioners yesterday lived up to their promise of a "bigger and better" Children's Air Society by proposing a substantial jump in the board rate for foster children in the county.

The present rate is $7 per week, and the commissioners tentatively offered a lump sum payment per month of $75 for each child.

Despite the recent controversy between the Monroe County Commissioners and the Children's Aid Society, the meeting yesterday between the commissioners and members of CAS, showed that, no rancor remained as they tried to work out an amicable board rate.

Representing CAS were Mrs. Violet Jones, president, and Mrs. William Wells and Mrs. Donald Gilpin, members of the Board of Directors.

Mrs. Jones said, in opening the discussion, that the CAS has taken no new cases since the two-month controversy ended, but said the group had wanted to clarify matters with the commissioners on board rate, in addition to contract negotiations now being conducted by Atty. Arlington Williams.

She then asked Mrs. Wells to speak, saying Mrs. Wells had a made a study of the board rate problem, and could present the CAS side of that matter.

Mrs. Wells said the present board rate, paid to foster homes for the care of children, set at $7 per week, was too low. The low rate, she said, prevented the society from placing any new children in homes.

The present number of foster homes, she said, is being maintained, but to increase the number as desired, the rate should be raised by the commissioners.

"The foster homes," Mrs. Wells said, "are the backbone of the society's aid to children, and we (CAS) need to keep them intact."

Extra expenses, she said, are cutting into the $7 figure making it almost impossible for the homes to provide the few extras desired for the children.

Mrs. Wells cited that milk costs about 26½ cents a quart, and for providing a quart a day to the child, it costs about $2 a week for milk alone.

Commissioner Willard Quick asked what figure the board had asked, and Mrs. Wells said a raise of the board rate to $12 per week would help, although it would not entirely make up all deficiencies.

A figure of $75 per month for each child with the foster home to take care of some duties now handled by CAS was mentioned by Quick, and he asked how long it would take for all homes to be queried as to this amount. Quick said this was part of the commissioners' plan for a bigger and better CAS.

The three members of the CAS board expressed pleasure with the amount mentioned.

The commissioners based their figure on that paid by the Lackawanna County commissioners for the care of children in that district.

Under this new board rate, the foster parents would also buy the clothes for the foster children under their care. In the past such purchases have been made by CAS. Case workers from CAS would check on the purchases, however, as they are made.

A per capita-per diem rate for the future was suggested, and this figure would include the administration costs not borne by the Community Chest, in addition to the board rate.

Chairman John Lesoine said that applications for reimbursement from state funds had just been received yesterday by the commissioners' office, and he said that in the past only about 20 percent of costs had been returned to the county.

Under the new plan, Lesoine said, it was hoped that more money would be gotten back by Monroe County.

Under the plan, the foster home will receive $75 per month for the first child, and $60 per month for any additional child taken care of.

The funds will be paid to the CAS immediately if the entire board approves, the commissioners stated.

A meeting will be held next Thursday to hear if the board will accept the new plan.

Senate Approves Tariff Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate ratified Tuesday by a 76-14 vote an international agreement aimed at reducing tariff and trade obstacles to exchange of educational, scientific and cultural materials.

The action makes the United States a party to an agreement adopted by the general conference of the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization at Florence, Italy in 1950.

The "Florence agreement," to which 31 nations including one from the Communist bloc already have adhered, covers imports of books and publications, visual and auditory materials, scientific instruments and various publications or articles for the blind.

Consultant Retained By Race Agency

HARRISBURG (AP) — Hanover attorney Jesse Crabbs, recognized as an expert on harness racing matters, has been retained temporarily as a consultant for the State Harness Racing Commission.

Lawrence B. Sheppard, commission chairman, said Crabbs will make up the official rulebook for operation of proposed harness racing tracks with parimutuel betting.

Sheppard, former president of the U. S. Trotting Assn., said Crabbs would receive $75-a-day for a period not exceeding 25 days.

Crabbs, 45, also served several terms as assistant district attorney of York County.

Fourteen counties submitted petitions to have the question placed on the April 26 primary ballot. The commission rejected the petitions for Chester County but approved the others.

Temperance Official Here

THE Seventh-day Adventist Young People's Society of Stroudsburg will hear a temperance official at their Sabbath evening service today at 7:45 p.m.

Pastor Dalton D. Baldwin, who heads the educational and temperance work for the sixty-one churches comprising the East Pennsylvania Conference of Adventists, will come from Reading headquarters to speak before the group.

From Washington, D. C., headquarters of the Columbia Union which takes in an eight-state area of local conferences, E. M. Peterson, who heads the temperance work for the Union, issued the following six-point statement.

(1). Seven out of ten adult men smoke; three out of ten adult women smoke; 37 percent of children 13 to 15 years of age smoke; 67 percent of those 16 to 19 smoke.

(2). In 1958 Americans puffed away 3,700 cigarettes for every person above 15 years of age.

(3). Science is proving more convincingly than ever that the cigarette is a health menace.

(4). A smoker of two packs of cigarettes has one chance in 10 of developing lung cancer, while non-smokers have one chance in 270 of developing it.

(5). Dr. Daniel Horn of the American Cancer Society's research authority, believes 25,000 persons could be saved from death in the next few years if cigarettes were done away with.

(6). The death rate from heart disease is twice as high for smokers, compared to non-smokers.

Baldwin is expected to urge the local youth group to commit themselves to a total abstinance of all harmful indulgences including coffee, tea, tobacco, alcoholic beverages, drugs and narcotics.

Cause Of Protas Death Not Determined By Coroner's Jury

Death Ruled Accidental By Jurors

A CORONER'S jury yesterday reached a decision in the death of George Protas, Brooklyn, N. Y., who was killed last Saturday in an accident on Route 611, finding Protas died accidentally. The direct cause of death was not determined.

A short second day of testimony was conducted under the direction of Coroner Daniel G. Warner. He read the statements given by two of the passengers in the car: Gene Bonnett, Bronx, N. Y., and Lorraine Scerbo, Flushing, N. Y.

Miss Scerbo's statement revealed she was riding in the rear seat of the auto, directly behind Protas, when the car, driven by Miss Elizabeth Wegmann, struck the truck on Route 611.

When asked if the truck was moving when the car hit the vehicle, she said she thought the truck was stopped at that moment.

Pinned Behind Wheel

After the crash, Miss Scerbo said she noticed Protas was no longer in the car, and at that time Bonnett ran over to ask her to help get Miss Wegmann out of the car. She was pinned behind the wheel, they reported.

The next thing she knew, she saw the car driven by Joseph Virtue, Jr., of Hemlock Creek, dragging Protas' body down the highway.

The next statement, from Bonnett, reported that Protas said: "I can't breathe."

Bonnett said he thought Protas fell over the back of the front seat when the small sports car struck the truck.

When Miss Scerbo was asked if the group had done any drinking just befort the accident, she said they had stopped for coffee at a diner shortly before the crash.

She was asked if she went over to look at Protas, and she said she had not.

Dragged on Highway

The next thing she knew, she replied, was that Protas was being dragged down the highway, and she had not seen the car approach. She did not actually see Protas being struck by the car, she said.

Asked what speed the Wegmann car was traveling at before striking the truck, Miss Scerbo said about 35 miles per hour.

Road conditions, she said, were bad, with extremely slippery spots on the highway.

Following the reading of these statements, Coroner Warner charged the jury to find its verdict.

British Admit Two Towers Are Leaning

LONDON (AP)—The Conservative government admitted Tuesday that two of the towers looming over the British Parliament are leaning.

The 329-foot tower housing the famous Big Ben clock bell is 15 inches out of plumb. The bell weighs 13 tons.

Victoria Tower, 336 feet high, which holds up another end of Westminster Palace, also is 15 inches off vertical.

Announcing this in the House of Commons, Minister of Works Lord John Hope took a calm view.

So far, he made clear, the Italian city of Pisa has nothing to worry about. The famous leaning tower of Pisa, only 179 feet tall, leans 16 feet out of line and is still upright, if you call that upright.

"Both of our towers," said Hope, "are being kept under close observation. There is no indication that the tilt is of recent development in either case, nor is there any concern as to the safety of the towers."

What caused the towers to lean has not been established. It is thought, however, that a German bombing in World War II that burned out the House of Commons chamber may have had something to do with it. The buildings of Westminster Palace date back to 1867.

Attendance at the fair, officials reported, was good despite the weather.

Judges Names

Judges were Grant Bartholemew and Harold Lee, physics and chemistry; Lewis Hastie and Russell Barhight, biology; George Learn and John Regan, Ninth Grade Science, and Mrs. Gloria Cox and H. W. Woodley, Seventh and Eighth grade science.

Members of the science faculty include Kenneth Lee, physics; John Regan, chemistry, Fred Shafer, biology; Thomas Knepp, biology; H. W. Woodley, Ninth grade science, and Jerome Stulgaitis and Mrs. Gloria Cox, Seventh and Eighth grade science.

County Native Dies At 77 After Illness

BANGOR — Mrs. Mary E. Flory Steinmetz, 77, Broadway and Third Sts., died yesterday morning in Allentown Hospital where she had been a patient for two weeks.

She was a native of Gilbert, the daughter of the late Joseph and Elizabeth Kresge Smale, and had lived here 50 years. She was the widow of Robert H. Steinmetz, an undertaker here for many years.

Mrs. Steinmetz was a member of Trinity Lutheran Church a life member of the Women's Missionary Socity of the church, and a member of the Bangor Senior Woman's Club.

She is survived by a sister, Mrs. Emma Borger of Kunkletown, and several nieces and nepnews.

Funeral services will be at 1:30 p.m. Monday in the Hough Funeral Home here.

Bond Quota Announced For County

MONROE County residents are asked to buy a minimum of $1,252,510 worth of U. S. Savings Bonds during 1960, reports E. H. Wyckoff, volunteer bond chairman for the county.

For Pennsylvania as a whole the year's sales objective is $431,900,000, approximately $33,000,000 more than actual sales of Series E and H savings bonds last year.

E and H Bond sales in Pennsylvania during January were $39,300,000 as compared to $39,700,000 a year ago. Of this amount, E bond purchases were $30,400,000, a gain of $400,000, over last year.

In Monroe County, January sales of E and H bonds totalled $158,502, the county chairman said.

Treasury Secretary Robert B. Anderson launched the sales promotion activities for savings bonds for 1960 with following statement:

"The savings bonds program represents the heart of the Treasury's efforts to manage the national debt in a non-inflationary manner. Sound debt management requires that the Government rely to the greatest extent possible on genuine savings to meet its borrowing requirements. The $42½ billion of our public debt represented by Series E and H bonds outstanding makes a direct and vital contribution to the economic health of the nation.

PARIS (AP) — President de Gaulle has given $20,000 he made on the third volume of his memoirs to 10 charities. He also gave $1,000 each to his home community of Colombey-Les-Deux-Eglises and to the village's Roman Catholic church.

Increase Noted In Payrolls For Selective Services Here

MONROE County's payroll for selected services increased from $5,773,000 in 1954 to $6,436,000 in 1958, the Bureau of the Census, U. S. Dept. of Commerce, reported yesterday.

The bureau published results of its 1958 census of business, comparing the figures with 1954, the last previous census.

Selected services includes hotels, rooming houses, camps, personal services, miscellaneous repair services, automobile repair services and garages, miscellaneous business services, motion pictures and amusement and recreation services other than motion pictures.

Monroe County receipts in 1958 from selected services amounted to $21,072,000, compared to $18,991,000 in 1954.

There were a total of 434 establishments in the field in 1958, an increase of 33 over the 401 of 1954.

The 1958 figures showed a total of 43 establishments in East Stroudsburg and 91 in Stroudsburg. The remainder are in other portions of the county.

Stroudsburg payrolls for 1958 were reported at $503,000 and East Stroudsburg's at $128,000.

Noted Educators To Speak At Faculty Meeting Today

TWO PROMINENT educators will be among the speakers at teachers' meetings of faculty members of Stroud Union School District today.

Dr. Paul Nowell Elbin, president of West Liberty State College, Wheeling, W. Va., will speak on "How To Be A Teacher—and Like It" at 9:30 a. m.

Dr. Elbin has headed West Liberty for 25 years and was the youngest college president in the nation when he assumed the post.

Among his other activities, he is the author of six books and articles in numerous publications.

Dr. Leland B. Jacobs, professor of education at Columbia University's Teachers College, will speak on "Language Necessities in the Elementary School" at 1 p. m.

Wrote Textbook

He is the author of a textbook, "Children and the Language Arts," has contributed articles to numerous periodicals and journals and has been active in workshops in Michigan where he received his master's degree from Michigan University and was supervisor of student teaching at Michigan State Normal College.

The all-day program will open at 9 a. m. with devotions by Rev. Francis M. Seeley. Dr. Elbin will be introduced by Earl F. Groner, superintendent of schools.

Following his talk, a coffee hour will be held in the high school cafeteria with music by the "Mountaineers," an ensemble from the school band.

The afternoon program will include department meetings for secondary teachers from 1 to 3 p. m. under direction of Dr. Richmond E. Meyers, professor of geology at Moravian College, and Henry J. Kauffman, assistant professor of industrial arts at Millersville State College.

Discussion Groups

Elementary teachers, meeting in the Arlington Heights School auditorium, will hear Dr. Jacobs and then break into discussion groups to discuss his talk.

Consultant for primary grade teachers will be Dr. Rebecca Stewart, director of elementary education in Bethlehem schools, while Mrs. Nevin Nonnemacher will act as chairman.

For intermediate grade teachers, consultant will be Miss Josephine B. Kerns, formerly associate professor and grade supervisor at East Stroudsburg State College. Mrs. Alan Sterner will be the chairman.

An informal discussion and tea in the auditorium will conclude the program.

Because of the meetings, today is a holiday for pupils in the Stroud Union District.

Mrs. Henry, Formerly Of Here, Dies

MRS. KATHERINE Henry, 59, of 124 Somerset St., Newark, N. J., died yesterday at 4:15 a.m. in Harrison S. Martland Medical Center, Newark, N. J., after a short illness.

She was the daughter of the late John and Lillian Adams Rammer of Stroudsburg and the widow of Reginald Henry.

Mrs. Henry had been a resident of Newark for the past 40 years. Prior residence was in Stroudsburg.

She is survived by several cousins in Stroudsburg.

Funeral services will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in the William H. Clark Funeral Home with Rev. W. H. Woodall officiating.

Interment will be in the Stroudsburg Cemetery.

Friends and relatives may call at the funeral home Saturday after 7 p.m.

O'Neill Dinner Slated Tonight

TOBYHANNA—A dinner honoring John F. O'Neill of Mount Pocono, retiring as administrative officer of the incentive awards program at the U. S. Army Signal Corps Depot here, will be held in the officers' club tonight.

A story yesterday erroneously reported the dinner was scheduled for Thursday night.

A. J. Molitor To Assume New Duties

ALBERT J. MOLITOR, who has resigned his post as executive secretary of the Children's Aid Society of Monroe County, will leave today to assume new duties in Philadelphia.

Molitor will be employed by the Children's Aid Society of Pennsylvania as an administrator in training, working under Dr. Elizabeth Lawder, director of the State CAS.

He and his wife will live in Germantown.

Molitor was employed by the local CAS for slightly over a year-and-one-half.

35 Students Visit U. N. Headquarters

POCONO PINES—A group of 35 students from Tobyhanna Township High School visited the United Nations in New York City Wednesday.

Ronald Davis, faculty member, and Samuel A. Lee, principal, accompanied them.

Their itinerary included a committee meeting at the UN, a lecture tour, attendance at a television show, Radio City Music Hall and sightseeing in Rockefeller Center.

At Ripon, Wis., in 1854, a movement was organized that later became the modern day Republican Party.

Unwarranted Pranks

Now that we've had our quota of false bomb scares, we hope they will cease and desist forever.

No good can come from pranks such as threatening people over the telephone, and only a person with a warped mind would receive any "kick" out of calls of this type.

A lot of inconvenience, even harm, can result from relaying false information behind the anonymity that a telephone affords, and those who perpetrate such frauds are in the same despicable class as anyone who pulls a fire alarm box without reason.

Mischief by telephone is not limited to bomb scares, however. Complaints have been heard from people who have been pestered by nuisance calls from time to time since the installation of dial equipment here last summer.

Some of the calls involve more than one party other than the caller, and often lead to an expense in addition to the inconvenience involved.

Not all of the pranks are perpetrated by juveniles. Older persons—practical jokers and crack-pots — have been caught after they had pulled off some sort of tricks on unsuspecting individuals.

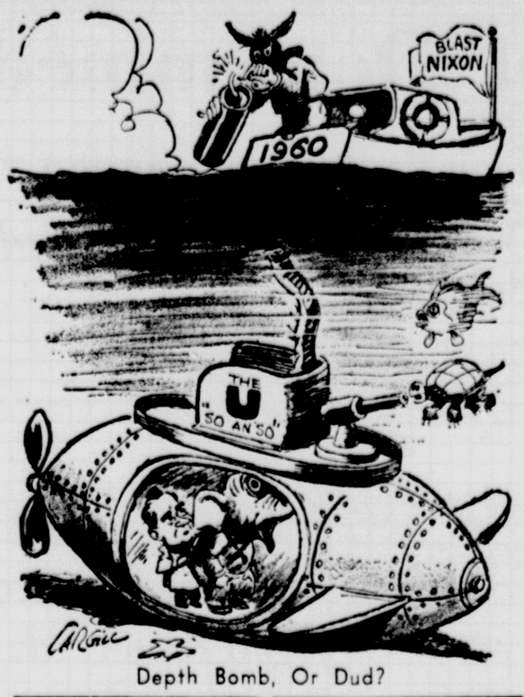
The point is, the guilty parties sometimes get away with their mischief for a time, but their luck sooner or later runs out on them and they face criminal prosecution for their deeds.

In the case of the call to the East Stroudsburg Area Joint High School, the entire student body and teaching staff must suffer by making up the lost time later in the school term. This is grossly unfair, of course, but school authorities have no other choice than to take such a course.

The Grand Theatre lost an undetermined amount of revenue because it was forced to cancel its second showing of a movie so that a search for the "bomb" could be made. This, too, works a hardship on the theatre management.

Worse still was the call made to the General Hospital. The lives of scores of patients, many of whom are critically ill, would be endangered were they to be moved from the building while a systematic search is made for a "bomb" that never existed. Hospital authorities are to be congratulated for the quiet manner in which they handled the case.

Let us suggest to those persons bent on having fun to look in a legitimate direction. Making anonymous telephone calls and threats is a practice that must stop, and enforcing the law is one way of halting it.



Depth Bomb, Or Dud?

Important Highway Question

Legislators investigating the State Highways Department forgot to ask an important question at a recent hearing.

Why was the department able to award 235 million dollars in new construction contracts in 1958 and only 65 million dollars in 1959.

Road contractors complained privately last year that the cutback had forced them to go out of the state and bid on projects. Associations backing particular projects like the Keystone Shortway, Anthracite Expressway and the Erie-West Virgina Freeway repeatedly expressed dismay about slow starts.

Highways Secretary Park H. Martin didn't volunteer the information at the hearings but he responded quickly—and assuredly — when the question was put to him by a reporter.

The answer was two-pronged:

1. The Lawrence administration, at the outset of 1959, inherited comparatively few completed construction and design plans that could be rapidly translated into bid requests.

2. The money picture was clouded by inaction in the Legislature and the Congress.

The 235 million dollars in road construction projects in 1958 is an all-time high in Pennsylvania. It was part of a crash program at the tail-end of the Leader administration to get going on highways. It was the result of a barrage of unfavorable publicity.

Former Gov. Leader also took the position that the crash program would help offset the effects of the economic recession that year.

But, as Martin indicated, the department was so busy that year on contract awards that it had not time left to look ahead on plans for the following year.

Then, in 1959, the Legislature was asked to increase the five-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax to six cents. Although passed by the House, the Senate strung out its decision to kill it until late in the year.

Meanwhile, Congress balked at hiking the federal gasoline levy so long that in August the U. S. Bureau of public Roads virtualy locked up further federal aid. For interstate highways, that was a big chunk of money — 90 per cent of the cost.

By the end of the year, the department counted up 65 million dollars in contracts awarded — rather puny in contrast to 1958's 235 millions.

What's the outlook for 1960?

Martin esitmates the department will award between 175 and 200 millions in new contracts this year.

Construction designs and plans are now starting to back up on the drafting desks to the point, Martin says, that the department can proceed without interruption on a 200-million-dollar annual program for several years.

The big "if" in this long-range program is revenue. That's why Martin wanted a higher gasoline tax.

Reports From Congress

New Aide For Symington

By Congressional Quarterly

Washington — In a year jam-packed with high-voltage election issues, the quiet death of one not-so-old partisan dispute has attracted little notice.

This is the atomic power issue, summed up by the Democratic platform of 1956 in these words: "The United States is lagging instead of leading in the world race for nuclear power, international prestige, and world markets."

That was the year Republicans barely defeated a bill by Sen. Albert Gore (D-Tenn.) directing the Atomic Energy Commission to build several large nuclear power plants on a "crash" basis.

Now, Gore has told Congressional Quarterly, members of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee are "reasonably satisfied" with AEC's new 10-year program for achieving competitive nuclear power.

The change of heart came about gradually over the past year, but came into focus only this week as the Joint Committee opened its annual hearings on the state of the atomic energy industry. Three major developments, it turns out, have helped to cool off what was once a superheated issue. These involved changes in foreign programs, in relations between the Joint Committee and AEC, and in domestic commercial power prospects.

No Kilowatt Race — The "world race" envisioned in 1956 has slowed to a walk as other nations have cut back their earlier plans for building massive amounts of nuclear power capacity.

The Euratom countries of Western Europe, spurred on by the 1957 Suez crisis, laid ambitious plans to relieve their dependence on Middle East oil by building 15 million kilowatts of nuclear power capacity by 1967. This goal has now vanished over the horizon, as Europe has found itself with a large coal surplus and new supplies of oil in Algeria and Libya.

The Soviets likewise announced plans in 1955 to install substantial amounts of nuclear power, but later revised their targets and stretched out their construction program.

Only the British have maintained a schedule that calls for five to six million kilowatts of nuclear power by 1966. Currently, therefore, international pressure on the United States to enter a "kilowatt race" remains at a low ebb.

A New Era — A second basic development affecting the atomic power issue was the new era that began when AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss stepped down in mid-1958. His successor, John A. McCone, set about repairing the Commission's neglected relations with the Joint Committee and it was in response to the Committee's urging that McCone drew up the 10-year program recently unveiled.

AEC's program doesn't call for any basic change in its policy of assuming responsibility for experimental work while leaving to industry the job of building full-scale nuclear power plants. But the program does allow for generous AEC assistance in building prototypes of promising reactor concepts, and envisions annual expenditures of $200 million over the next ten years for the civilian power program.

Based on a careful technical appraisal of the economic prospects for each of several types of power reactors, AEC's program offers hope of considerable progress toward the achievement of competitive nuclear power by 1968 or earlier. The Commission's approach leaves little room for critics to argue for a more rapid pace.

Breakthrough — The final factor in cooling off the nuclear power issue amounts to a technological breakthrough. This is the offer of two manufacturers to build 300,000-kilowatt nuclear power plants on terms that appear to make them competitive with conventional plants in certain high-energy-cost areas at the present time.

The offers were made recently by Westinghouse Co., developer of the pressurized water system used in the "Nautilus" and other submarines, and General Electric Co., builder of Commonwealth Edison's 180,000-kw plant at Morris, Ill., which begins operation this year. Both manufacturers are in negotiations with Pacific Coast utility companies.

In sum, the bleak outlook that prompted Democrats to urge an all-out Government-financed power reactor construction program has been dissipated, leaving in its wake one dead issue.

George Sokolsky Says . . .

Those Air Force Manuals

Recently one of the really authentic leaders of anti-Communist activity in the United States wrote to me, "God help us from the anti-Communists."

There are so many varities of them and some of them are so mixed up. They have a "feeling" against Communism, against Russia against many things, but they do not know why.

They have an emotional antagonism to Communism but they refuse to do the homework required to know of a force that came into the world more than a century ago and now dominates the lives of close to a billion human beings. Instinctive opposition to so colossal a force is not good enough.

The pamphlet prepared for the Air Force by Homer H. Hyde is supposed to indoctrinate members of the Air Force against Communism.

But Hyde does not know where his data about clergymen infiltrating the Protestant churches came from. He says that he got it from Circuit Riders, Inc., of Cincinnati, from Dr. Billy James Hargis, a radio evangelist of Tulsa, from an editorial in the San Antonio "Light," and a pamphlet issued by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Actually this data appeared originally in the "American Mercury," in an article signed by Dr. J. B. Matthews, a well-informed student of the American Communist problems, whose records on the subject are perhaps the most complete.

At the moment that Dr. Matthews' article appeared in the "American Mercury", he was to have been appointed in charge of research for the McCarthy Committee. The article created such a furor that Matthews withdrew from the post.

However, Matthews never properly defended himself. He could truthfully have said that a paragraph had been "edited" into his material which made it more sensational than it would have been had there been no editing.

An issue at stake in this controversy is the Revised Standard Version of the Bible. Be it remembered that the Bible was originally written in Hebrew, Aramaic and Greek. Each English version is a translation direct or indirect from these languages.

The first English translation of the Bible from the Hebrew and the Greek was that of William Tyndale, who was burned at the stake in 1536 for doing it.

There have been a great many translations of and commentaries upon both the Old and New Testaments. One of the major difficulties about the King James version is that English is a changing language. Stuart English is not current English. Words have different meanings and different weights in a fluid language such as English is.

I recall once being pestered by a member of one of the sects that base themselves upon the Book of Daniel which they accept as final. This fellow insisted upon converting me to his point of view; I preferred my own wickedness.

Finally, in arrogant anger, I told him to learn how to read Daniel in its original tongue and I shall discuss it with him. Of course, I was wrong.

It is not essential for one to know every language but it is to be assumed that translations will be improved as scholarship is sharpened and it is also to be assumed that each era will translate works of significance into its own idiom.

When all of the Dead Sea Scrolls shall have become available, additional alterations in some texts may be made and scholars will quarrel about them for a century.

Those who are not s. may be very embarrassed when they find themselves confronted by very early texts in original languages which they cannot read.

As regards the Old Testament, a scholar must be fluent in Hebrew and Aramaic; he must have studied the Five Books of Moses (the Masoretic text), the Samaritan and Syriac versions, probably the Coptic text, the Targum, the Midrash, and much more.

It is a life-time of devotion but there are Jewish and Christian scholars who are at work all the time.

Dr. Nelson Glueck, of the Hebrew Union College — Jewish Institute of Religion, is proving, by archeological means, the veracity of Biblical place names with such skill that it assists in the geological studies of the Egyptian-Arabian peninsula area.

Whoever Homer H. Hyde is, he has not done the kind of work essential to prepare the minds of those in the Air Force to protect themselves from the fallacies of Marxian clergy.

Soviets — U.S. froze the assets of citizens of three Soviet satelites who have been attacking American envoys and citizens.

England — Britain's voters have returned the Socialist Labor Party to power, but with a majority of only 10 seats in Parliament. Communists run a poor fourth, behind them. In this country the GOP pointed to the election as a sign of the world trend that will help them obtain charge of Congress in October.

House Page — James W. Walter, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Walter, Mountainhome, was appointed by Rep. Francis Walter to serve as page in U.S. House of Representatives.

With Walter Winchell On Broadway

The B'way-H'wood Zoo

They call it conceit, vanity, egomania or just plain ham. Basically, it is a wild illusion complicated by spoiled-child emotions. The consequences are frequently grotesque as well as irrational. Occasionally, it is amusing — but not for those directly involved. The outstanding contemporary example is Jack Paar, of course, and his coast-to-coast tantrum . . . After the network deprived him of a favorite toy . . . The toy in this case, was a stale joke. Why performers perform — both onstage and off — was probably best explained by Jackie Gleason, an authority on the subject. To wit: "Actors can never do anything they want to; they always have to figure out what effect it's going to have on other people—an audience or just the guy you're talking to at lunch. Pretty soon you run your whole life that way. Not 'How am I going to like this?' but 'How is this going to seem to other people?'"

Mme. Callas is always playing the prima donna. She has walked out on shows, battled with impresarios, engaged in brawls with fellow performers—both verbal and physical. She is a sort of armed island firing on One and All. She once confessed: "I understand hate. I respect revenge. You have to defend yourself. You have to be strong, very, very strong. That's what makes you have fights."

Much of La Callas' ferocity is derived from an unhappy childhood. She is the classic case of the miserable child who grows up to take revenge against the world. In interview after interview, she has expressed bitterness toward her mother.

France Nuyen gave another headline performance the other day. She was dropped from a movie as a consequence of torch-lugging For M. Brando. The romantic pangs made her a compulsive eater. She added to much poundage and lost her job. Success has been Miss Nuyen's unwelcome companion. She has scorned those who helped her attain stardom. "It is sad," she declared, "that other stars don't recognize that many people who call themselves their friends really aren't. They sit on the tip of their cloud until the rains come and then they fall through. And then they wonder what happened to all their friends."

Success Has More Friends Than People.

Kim Stanley is another who has been playing the role of a tempermental actress — in the newspapers. Last season she created a page-one blaze by exiling herself from "A Touch of the Poet" after breaking diplomatic relations with co-star Eric Portman. Miss Stanley is her own toughest critic. Although reviewers have always showered her with praise, she has criticized them. Moreover, she has been publicly scornful of her performance in "Bus Stop" and "The Traveling Lady" — the shows that elevated her to stardom. Despite the rave notices for her emoting in "The Goddess" flicker, she stated: "I didn't like it." Miss Stanley's world is not just a stage —it is also a battlefield.

The Sad Goddess is probably Hollywood's strangest product. They are the curvy charmers, the radiant queens —who have a streak of melancholy beneath the glazed beauty. Ava Gardner has been portraying the Sad Goddess role for many years. There is no unhappiness in her private life that has not been made public. She has battled with producers, newspapermen and husbands on three continents. Miss Gardner's problems are motivated by fear—the gnawing fact that stardom is trancient—and so is beauty. Her co-workers report that she frequently studies her likeness in the mirror—and must constantly be reassured that she is beautiful.

Interpreting The News

Anglo-German Relations Worsen

By J. M. Roberts
(AP News Analyst)

Relations between Britain and West Germany have taken a trend which must be eminently pleasing to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and show signs of getting worse instead of better between now and the summit conference.

On the surface the trouble revolves around the position to be taken by the Allies at the conference.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer maintains that any compromise on the status of West Berlin ultimately would represent a threat to West Germany itself.

Britain thinks there is a chance of negotiating a settlement eliminating some of the Soviet complaints about Berlin as a center of espionage, propaganda, and refuge for dissident East Germans, as well as a reduction in occupation forces.

Adenauer's efforts to veto this idea have produced a strong reaction in Britain directed as much against his attitude as against the fundamentals of the situation.

In the background are two British worries. West Germany's trade recovery has carried it into strong competition for export markets.

West Germany's power in NATO has grown because of its military revival, and its economic connections with France and the rest of the continent create an incubator for a concentration of continental political power such as Britain has always feared.

The British press is screaming its head off because of what is termed a stupid German attempt to revive military ties with Spain beginning with establishment of rear-area supply bases for the German army. Both Spain and Germany have backed away on this.

So the divided Allies have been unable to make any progress on a summit program at their conference in Washington.

The Allen-Scott Report

Nuclear Power Grounded

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington—Senator Stuart Symington is pondering a major shake-up in his still "unofficial" presidential race.

Leading supporters of the Missourian are strongly urging that he install a more experienced and forceful manager to appreciably intensify the pace and scope of his campaign for the Democratic nomination.

Their choice is Clark Clifford, White House special counsel to former President Truman, and now a highly successful Washington attorney. In addition to being widely and cordially known among influential Democrats throughout the country, he is a talented speech writer.

Clifford has indicated he would take this job.

Currently filling the role of Symington's campaign manager is Representative Charles Brown, 40-year-old Springfield, Mo., radio and advertising official. Serving his second term in Congress, Brown has had no national political experience.

Foremost among those advocating that Clifford be made campaign manager are former Democratic National Chairman Frank McKinney and William Boyle, and F. J. "Jiggs" Donohue, 1956 campaign manager for Senator Estes Kefauver. Certain Senate colleagues of Symington have also advised this.

Opposing it are Missouri Democratic Chairman Wilbur Daniels, National Committeeman Mark Holloran, Rep. Clarence Cannon, Mo., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and Stanley Fike, administrative assistant to Symington.

Former President Truman has expressed no opinion either way as yet.

But his views will be sought by Symington before making up his mind. He has told both sides he will consult with Truman before doing anything about a new campaign manager.

Chief inside complaint against Brown is that he is "out of his league" in managing a nationwide campaign; that he lacks the political ties and general know-how for that particularly this year with a number of Democratic aspirants aggressively seeking the presidential nomination.

Cited as a striking illustration of this was Brown's ineffectiveness at the recent Western Democratic Conference in Albuquerque, N.M. He knew few of these important party leaders, and apparently made no impact on them.

One of Brown's critics later caustically remarked, "Charley has been back a week, but he still hasn't told us whether he lined up any delegates out there."

The pro-Clifford group is not urging the complete shelving of Brown. Their proposal is that the active management of Symington's campaign be turned over to Clifford, and Brown remain as the Missouri Senator's personal adviser. Their point is this is about all Brown is doing now.

Symington Sparks — The letter formally announcing Senator Symington's presidential candidacy is already printed, but still undecided is when it will be sent out to some 25,000 Democratic leaders throughout the country. According to aides of the Missourian, this may not be done until after Easter.

They also say he is having no difficulty financing his campaigning. Chief expenditures are postage, traveling expenses and a lot of long-distance telephoning. Although Symington is not entering any of the presidential primaries, he anticipates that his name will be listed in Oregon's wide open race and he will not seek its withdrawal. Neither does he plan to do any active campaigning there.

Principal Symington campaign center is an office in the Investment Building, 15th & K, N.W., in downtown Washington, three blocks from the White House and within a few blocks of leading hotels. Walls of the two-room suite are decorated with big picture posters describing the Missourian as a "veteran-statesman-businessman". . . This "field headquarters" is run by William Perkins, Jr., young assistant to Representative Charles Brown. Also active in this office is William J. Bray, one-time press assistant to former Postmaster General James Farley and now a Washington attorney.

Veteran's Guide

Q—Is it possible for a young man or woman to take a regular high school education under the War Orphans school program?

A—No. The law prohibits regular high school studies under the program. Many below-college-level courses may be taken, but the course must be one which offers specialized vocational training which will equip the student for a vocational training which will equip the student for a vocational goal.

Q—I am the widow of a World War II veteran, and up to now have not been eligible for a pension because my husband's death was not service connected. I understand the new pension law has changed that, and that I may now be eligible. Is this correct?

A—Yes. Widows of World War Two and Korea veterans may now be eligible if their husbands had 90 days or more of active service, part of it honorable conditions. The widows' incomes, of course, must not exceed legal limits for pension eligibility.

Q—I have just reinstated my Government insurance and don't want it to lapse again. How can I use my dividends to keep my insurance from lapsing?

A—Before your next dividend is due, ask VA to hold it for you as a credit. Once this dividend credit is earned, VA can use it to keep your insurance in force. VA does this by withdrawing a monthly premium from your dividend credit whenever the premium due is not paid by the end of the 31-day grace period.

Q—I am at school under the Korean GI Bill and don't feel I am making satisfactory progress with the course I am taking. Can I change it?

A—Yes, that is possible, provided of course that the lack of progress is not due to your own misconduct, neglect or lack of application, and if you have not already had a change of course up to now.

Try and Stop Me —by Bennet Cerf

A philosopher was invited to be guest of honor at a big banquet, but absentmindedly arrived in a business suit, and soon noticed that the welcoming committee was distinctly upset. So he unostentatiously withdrew, put on his dinner dress suit, and reappeared.

Led with a great show of deference to the dais, he waited until the soup was served, then spilled it drop by drop on his elegant suit. "Eat well, my fine suit," he said distinctly, an edge of fine sarcasm in his voice, "for it obviously was you and not me who was invited here this evening!"

A very pretty girl approached Richard Rodgers for a part in the English company of "Flower Drum Song." "Come over to Shubert Alley with me and hear me sing," she begged. "What's the matter with the stage of the St. James Theater?" asked Dick. "Oh, I could never sing there," shuddered the girl. "When I'm in a theater I get stage fright."

JOINING the James Micheners, Herman Wouks and Moss Harts on best-seller lists is a 78-year-old country doctor named D. C. Jarvis. For years Dr. Jarvis has been prescribing for his patients in Vermont a reasonably unpleasant tasting potion consisting of a couple of teaspoons of cider vinegar and honey diluted in a glass of water. Finally, he enlarged on the magic possibilities of this cure in a book called "Folk Medicine"—and is it selling!

I haven't met another doctor yet who'll say more than, "I don't believe it can harm anybody," but you show the American public a way to "get cured fast" and well, "Folk Medicine" is over the 300,000-mark, and the publishers think it's barely started!

"Love by numbers" (from an old almanac):

2 lovers sat beneath the shade,
And 1 un 2 the other said,
"How 14 8 that you be 9
Have smiled upon this suit of mine.
If 5 a heart it palps for you.
Thy voice is mu 6 melody.
'Tis 7 to be thy loved 1, 2;
Say, oh nymph, wilt marry me?"
Then lisped the maid, "Why, 13 ly!"

Mutuals Here To Stay

By William A. Doyle

. I feel you write too much in favor of mutual funds. The big selling points of the mutual funds are professional management and diversification. I'll admit that you have explained all the costs involved in buying and owning mutual fund shares. I give you credit for that.

But why don't you inform your readers about the other dark side of the funds? As far as this so-called professional management is concerned, I am convinced that most mutual funds merely "ape" the market.

They buy stocks when the prices of those stocks are high, simply because those stocks are popular. And diversification becomes overdiversification, because each fund buys too many different securities.

If all investors knew this they would join me in saying, "Down with mutual funds."

A. Don't hold your breath waiting for this country's investors to go along with you. There was a time when mutual funds were scoffed at as a passing fancy — for the alleged reasons you spout.

You'll have a tough time convincing the millions of people who own shares of mutual funds. That number is increasing. Mutual funds are clearly here to stay.

There's no sense in my denying that some funds are guilty of faults you mention. But most are not. There are over 300 mutual funds in this country. It's up to each investor to pick the fund whose performance and objective suits him.

It has never been claimed here that an investment in shares of a mutual fund is a sure-fire thing. Many millions of investors can do as well, or even better, by investing on their own.

But, for others who need professional management and diversification, good mutual funds are almost made to order.

Q. I own shares of a mutual fund. I recently decided to take all my dividends and capital-gains distributions in additional shares rather than in cash.

On the date the latest dividend and capital-gains distribution became effective the asset value of each share fell. I now own more shares but the total value of my investment is almost exactly the same as it was before the dividend and capital-gains distribution were made. Isn't there something wrong here?

A. No. The value of each share is determined by the assets each share is backed up by. When a dividend and/or capital-gains distribution is paid on the shares, the amount paid is naturally deducted from the value of each share.

If you took the dividend and capital-gains distribution in cash, you would have money equal to the amount paid. And your investment would be worth that much less. By taking the dividend and capital-gains distribution in shares, you simply own more shares. The total value of your investment remains just about the same. It changes somewhat, of course, because of the daily rise or fall in the asset value of the fund's shares.

Much the same thing happens to any stock. When a dividend is paid, the stock goes "ex-dividend" and the amount of the dividend is deducted from the market value of the stock.

Warn Against Law Violations

HARRISBURG (AP)—The secretary of labor and industry Tuesday advised Pennsylvania employes to guard against violations of the hourly provisions of the state women and child labor laws.

"The Commonwealth has no wish to penalize the owners of business who provide employment for Pennsylvania," said William L. Batt Jr. "On the other hand, we have the obligation to make sure that provisions of laws enacted for the health and safety of employers are scrupulously observed."

Batt issued the reminder in reporting that the Riverside Shoe Corp., Millersburg, had been fined $260 and costs on charges some of its women employes had worked as much as 60 hours a week.

He pointed out that women may not be employed for more than 48 hours a week or for more than 10 hours in any day.

Satellite Now Identified

WASHINGTON (AP) — The mystery polar satellite which has been under observation for several weeks probably is a recovery capsule of a Discoverer rocket launched last August, the Defense Department said Tuesday.

The department said it based this belief on continuing analysis by tracking stations of the Navy and Air Force of activities of the silent satellite which is circling the earth in a near polar orbit.

The Defense Department first reported the mystery satellite on Feb. 3, saying it was in a polar orbit circling the earth every 104½ minutes.

Plan To Expand

MEXICO CITY (AP)—TV stations in this capital are studying plans to expand their program schedules to include morning shows. Most Mexican stations now are on the air from afternoon to midnight.

Dear Abby

He's A Wheel, Mom

Dear Abby: I frequently hear mothers complain that their teen-aged sons have girl-friends. They should know how lucky they are. I wish my 18-year-old son would take a little more interest in girls. He is in love with his car. He can't get a cent ahead because of his car. He never takes out a girl because he spends his evenings in the garage working on his car. There are lots of worse things than girls . . . and one of them is a hot rod.

TROUBLED MOTHER

Dear Mother: Give him time. I'd rather have my son "ga ga" over a body on four wheels than some of those I have seen on two legs!

* * *

Dear Abby: I am 15 but I am very mature for my age. I go steady with a boy who is 17. He is also mature for his age. We are very much in love and plan to get married in three years. When we get married we do not want children right away. Will you please tell me exactly how married couples put off having a family until they want one? I don't want you to leave out any of the details as this is very important to me.

Please don't tell us to ask our parents, as they are not the kind you can talk to. I want to know EVERYTHING, so don't disappoint me.

MUST KNOW

Dear Must: I don't furnish readers (married or unmarried) with information on birth control. Furthermore, a 15-year-old girl who "must know EVERYTHING" right now for use three years from now is asking for "instant trouble". Married couples can obtain this information (free) from their local Planned Parenthood Center. Those whose religion forbids this should talk to their clergymen.

* * *

Dear Abby: I am a woman (over 21) who has never been married. I met a man whose wife is serving time in the State Penitentiary. This is her third time and she will be there until 1966. He tells me that under these circumstances he does not need a divorce from her to marry me. Is this correct? It doesn't make sense to me. He says this is called "automatic divorce".

TAKING NO CHANCES

Dear Taking: There are no "automatic" divorces. If this man is deliberately trying to talk you into a marriage which he knows to be illegal, tell him to get lost.

* * *

Confidential to Johnny: You can give her a ring . . . but if she is "loose" no matter how tight the ring is, it won't stop her circulation.

* * *

For Abby's pamphlet "What Every Teen-ager Wants To Know," send 25 cents and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope in care of this paper.

Fellowship Sets Date For Election

STERLING — Officers will be elected on March 16 by the Adult Fellowship, and a nominating committee was appointed during the February meeting held at the home of Mrs. Robert Rochfort.

A slate of officers will be presented by Doris Smith and Mae Gilpin.

Margery Altemier presided during the business meeting when a donation toward the support of a Korean orphan was voted. A donation of $100 was also given to the general fund of the church.

Discussed was the adult convocation at The Inn, Buck Hill Falls, on March 10-13. The local Fellowship will be represented at some of the sessions. Plans for the Every Member Canvass on March 20 were reviewed.

Ruth Tripus and Gayle Rigby will have charge of refreshments for the March 16 meeting.

Guide Eases Rose Selection Job

RECENTLY, garden writers throughout America had a chance to vote for their choice of the best roses. Their selections gave some indication of how befuddling it can be to select roses for the garden.

It's difficult to say which rose will be best for you, but to make the job simpler the American Rose Society has prepared a 1960 Guide for Buying Roses which can be helpful in selecting.

The guide lists 455 varieties of roses, each evaluated from 10 to 5. It lists 253 hybrid teas, 92 floribundas and 11 grandifloras, plus 58 climbers, all based on reports from rose growers throughout America.

If you'd like a free copy of this 1960 Guide for Buying Roses, send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Only one copy per reader, please. Write to me c/o this newspaper for your free copy.

Plastic bags: Our readers have sent in some fine tips for using old plastic bags in horticulture. Here are a couple more uses;

(1) Bags are ideal for gathering mosses, berries, slips of your friends.

(2) Another reader cuts the plastic in strips and uses these for tying roses and other plants to canes or stakes.

(3) One gardener planted a small patch of poppy seeds in the ground last fall, covered them with a square plastic sheet, with rocks on the edges to hold it in place. He now has a nice patch of poppies that are ready to transplant when the weather is right. He also covered his newly set shrubs with plastic sheets, and reports they're doing fine.

Please keep on sending me your tips for our bulletin.

Polishing Driftwood: What's the best way to polish driftwood? Some folks like a high polish to their driftwood, but actually a bright finish isn't necessary. In fact, driftwod to me, looks more natural if left with a dull finish.

I've seen a lot of driftwood in shops, ruined by too high a gloss or finish. If you like a high gloss on yours, use sandpaper and plenty of elbow grease.

A buffing machine will produce a high gloss, if shoe polish or wax are used. Some home owners even take the trouble to varnish their driftwood. It's all a matter of personal taste.

Verbenas: If you want a good annual, try verbena, ideal for narrow borders in sunny areas. They thrive in window boxes, give color to bare spots in a perennial border, make showy borders, spreading over quite a wide area.

If you have a long border and cannot afford geraniums to do the job, plant verbenas for a mass of color. Verbena seed may be started early indoors or sown outside for later bloom.

Question Box

C. N. of Stroudsburg: "I want to plant some privet, but understand there are two kinds. I'd like the kind that holds its leaves in Winter, and one that's hardy."

There are many kinds of privets but two which are commonly planted are the California privet and the Amur River. The California privet is a Japanese kind botanically known as Ligustrum ovalifolium, an erect, glossy-leaved shrub growing 10 feet or more if allowed.

This one makes a fine "filler" for floral arrangements and is the prettiest of the two privets. It is not altogether hardy and will kill back to the ground every few years when subzero weather hits. However, this isn't always a bad feature because it's often good for a hedge to kill back to ground level.

This enables you to cut the hedge back and allow new growth to come up and fill in. In this way you get rid of a lot of old, tough wood and you can train your hedge to remain at any height you want. Usually the new growth fills in within a year.

A hardier substitute, but not so handsome, is the Amur Privet (L. amurense). It too will grow 10 feet in height but can be pruned to any height and sheared to desired form. All privets are easy to plant or transplant and will take average soil.

Plant them 9 to 12 inches apart and it's not necessary to stagger them in a trench. If you don't want a trimmed hedge, plant privets for untrimmed screens (will grow in quite shady places).

T. F. of Gilbert: "I'm a novice gardener and would like to start seeds indoors, using 'peat pots.' Please tell me how to use them, also soil mixture."

More and more gardeners and greenhouse operators are using the so-called "Jiffy pots," "Peat pots," etc. These pots are made of peat, some compressed manure, some paper. Some are containers made of wood.

I like the peat pots as they have thin porous walls, allow good aeration of roots, they hold up well and you can set out "pot and all," with no check in growth. In our greenhouse we first start the seed in flats, then when seedlings are an inch or so tall, we transplant them to the pots which are lined in a flat.

The pots contain a soil mixture of 1/3 peat, 1/3 sand and 1/3 loam. Pots come in sizes from 2¼" round pots to 3" round. Some are 2¼" to 3" square and they'll cost you around 2 cents. Some gardeners start the seed directly in the pots, without bothering to transplant them from the seed flats and you can do this.

The pots contain all the roots and are ideal for spring bedding plants or vegetables. You can also resort to the new square "Pony Paks"—containers about 7½" x 5½" x 2¼" deep, widely used by commercial growers for bedding plant sales. Seedlings are transplanted to them after being started in seed flats.

Heart Fund Collections On Sunday

HOWARD ATWELL, heart fund chairman, said last night the First Stroudsburg National Bank will be open Sunday from 3 to 6:30 p.m. to receive collections from the workers of the Heart Fund Drive.

Atwell added, "To the persons who were not at home when the worker made his call a "not-at-home envelope" was left for the contribution. This envelope should be mailed, with your contribution, to Mrs. Dorothy Oliver, Stroudsburg RD 3."

Miss Arvilla Peters and Mrs. Betty Foote will be at the "bank with the town clock" to receive the workers collections. They ask that all workers make their deposits during the hours specified.

12 Arrested In Gambling Raid

SHAMOKIN, (AP) —Authorities arrested 12 men Wednesday in a pre-dawn smoke shop raid described by Police Chief George Haddock as the start of a crackdown on gambling here.

Walter Boris, Shamokin, was arrested on a chage of maintaining a gambling place. Alderman Robert Bird ordered him held in lieu of $300 bond.

Haddock said each of the other 11 men were charged with disorderly conduct and fined $15. Haddock said he and eight other police officers entered the smoke shop and found a card game in progress with money on the table.

Haddock said he had the shop under surveillance for a week after receiving a number of complaints.

Hope For Peace Seen By Teenagers In Travels By Ike And Khrushchev

By Eugene Gilbert
President of the Gilbert Youth Research Co.

The more they get together, the better off we'll be.

That's the feeling of most teen-agers toward globe trotting by world leaders.

We wondered whether young people think much good is accomplished by such travels as President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev have been making. The answer: an overwhelming "yes."

Of nearly 800 youngsters asked if they felt an exchange of such visits would lead to better relations between nations, 82 per cent favored the program. Only 14 per cent were opposed.

Most young people agreed with Carol Wiborg, 16, of Chicago, who said, "If men put aside prejudices and speak freely among each other, it will eventually lead to peace.

More boys (88 per cent) than girls (72 per cent) favored a policy of international fraternization. But both boys and girls agreed that leaders of friendly and Cold War nations alike should be invited to visit this country. "By reasonable discussion," said Loretta LoGrasso, 17, of Youngstown, Ohio, "we can iron out differences with other countries."

A minority view came from 17-year-old Marianne Klinger of Youngstown, who said such meetings "will only cause more trouble."

Teen-agers would most like to see French Premier Charles de Gaulle visit the United States. Others mentioned frequently were Prime Minister Nehru of India and Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba.

Playing No Favorites

Also suggested for state visits were Queen Elizabeth of England, Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, Ben Gurion of Israel and West German chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

Evelyn Grimini, 17, of San Francisco, said, "It it easier to settle disputes when nations know what makes one another tick."

Some 57 per cent of the teenagers we talked to said it would be a good idea to invite Egypt's Premier Nasser to this country while 32 per cent were opposed. Another 11 per cent had no opinion.

"It might relieve some of the tension in the Middle East if we spoke to him," said Jerry Tannhauser, 17, of San Francisco. And Donald Harms, 18, of Farmington, Mich., said, "I think any foreign leader who wants to should be able to see what America has done and how America can help their country."

However, George Huebner, 17, of Amelia, Ohio, disagreed. He said: "Naser is a neutral who will, if given the opportunity, accept aid from both sides and yet only intend to help himself." And Anita Saverhof, 16, of Flushing, N. Y., said, "It does no good. They come here with a closed mind."

As for inviting Red China's Premier Chou En-lai to the United States, 55 per cent of the young people were in favor, 86 per cent against and 9 per cent undecided.

K's Visit Okayed

"His country was won by force and we could win it to our American way of life by friendship," said Raymond Noble, 15, of New York City. Jordap Glazov, 17, of Chicago, said, "The Chinese will soon be the most powerful people on earth; we had better be friends."

Eighty per cent of our teeners approved of inviting Premier Khrushchev to this country. Fifteen per cent were opposed and 5 per cent did not know.

Harley Hurlburt, 16, of Bennigton, Vt., said that by seeing this country "Khrushchev gained more respect for the United States, even if he wouldn't admit it." And 17-year-old Robert Wilkeson, Poland, Ohio, said, "He got a first hand look at our country and saw how strong we are."

However, there were some dissents. Claude Cates, 17, of Cincinnati, said "Khrushchev's visit was a waste of money and time. He won't tell the people what he saw, and it just gave him an idea of what he is up against."

Some 82 per cent of the boys and girls agreed the invitation was no sign that this country approve of Khrushchev or his tactics. Said Evelyn Erspeke, 17, of San Francisco, "He wouldn't be as simple minded as that." Such a view added George Huebner "would be gravely underestimating his inteligence."

Helen Dohar, 17, of Youngstown, Ohio, said, "I think we gave him the impression we were trying to get to know him better and eventually iron out the differences between his country and ours."

Fire Patrol Pilot Subject Of Article

A STROUDSBURG man is the subject of an article appearing in the current issue of "East Wind," employe publication of Sears, Roebuck and Co.

He is Don London, manager of the plumbing and heating department in the Sears agency here and an airborne fire-fighter during the Spring and Fall fire seasons.

The article points out that London started flying in 1946, received a private license in 1947, a commercial license in 1948 and an instructor's rating in 1953. It continues:

Fire Danger

"Each Spring, before the leaves come out on the trees, there is a period of four to six weeks in the Poconos of hazy weather with high fire danger. During this period, spotters in the fire towers are unable to see more than one-half mile and the plane spotters are called in to fly over the area.

"London and his fellow pilots fly fire patrol patterns for the state forestry department, often for as long as three hours at a stretch."

The article quotes London as saying that most of the fliers know the area "like their own living room." When they spot a fire, they radio its location if they have a plane radio or land and phone forest rangers.

Drop Notes

Frequently, during big fires over large areas, London will load a forest ranger into his plane and carry him over the fire area. If there is no radio, the ranger uses a can with a streamer attached to drop notes coordinating the work of fire fighters in different sections.

London, 39, lives in the Franklin Hill section of East Stroudsburg RD 3, with his wife, Olive, and their son, Bill, who graduated last year from East Stroudsburg Area Joint High School.

London's wife is a part-time employe of the tea room of A. B. Wyckoff Store, in which the Sears agency is located.

Carmine G. DeSapio, leader of New York's politically powerful Tammany Hall, was forced to give up the study of law because rheumatic fever impaired his eyesight.

World Traveler To Give Israel Bond Talk Here

STROUDSBURG Committee State of Israel Bonds yesterday announced that Ira Feinberg, world traveler and noted lecturer, will appear at Temple Israel Sunday at 8:30 p. m. in behalf of the second development issue of State of Israel Bonds.

Feinberg is one of the most authoritative public speakers on the Middle East, and in this capacity has appeared in many American communities in the past few years. During the past decade, he has traveled extensively in Europe, North Africa and Israel, gathering material for lectures and articles.

Ira Feinberg

Army Intelligence

For a number of years, Feinberg served in military intelligence of the U. S. Army as a translator of Arabic. He speaks many Arabic dialects and several foreign languages, including Hebrew, Spanish, Italian and Russian. He is a graduate of Queens College in New York City.

Prior to Israel's establishment as a state in 1948, Feinberg aided in bringing immigrants to Palestine. He was present in Israel during that country's War of Liberation.

Feinberg recently returned from a fact-finding tour of Israel, where he met key government officials, leading industrialists and top-ranking military commanders, including Gen. Moshe Dayan and Gen. Ezer Weizmann, commander of the Air Force. During this trip, he inspected many agricultural and industrial projects and witnessed the mineral development taking place in the southern Negev region with the aid of Israel Bonds.

The State of Israel Bond Issue is the central source of investment capital for Israel's historic program of economic development. Proceeds derived through the sale of Israel bonds are making possible the building of permanent homes, the growth of industry and agriculture, the expansion of irrigation, the construction of roads, harbors and railways, the increase of electric power, and the exploitation of natural resources.

Draft Board Reminds Men To Register

SELECTIVE service officials yesterday reminded male residents 18 years of age or older, born on or after Aug. 30, 1922, and have not registered, that they go to the nearest local board and register.

Failure to register, when required, may subject men to a maximum of five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

Men released from active duty in any branch of the service, are required to report to a Selective Service Board within ten days after their separation date.

Prior military duty or membership in any Reserve Unit does not relieve a man from the liability of registering with Selective Service. Registration is required on a man's 18th birthday, or within five days thereafter.

Local Board 105 is located in Room 206, Post Office Building, Stroudsburg, and is open Monday through Friday, with the exception of holidays.

Edward Garris Rites Conducted

FUNERAL services were held yesterday at 2 p.m. in the Lanterman Funeral Home for Edward P. Garris, 83, of Bushkill with Rev. Harold C. Eaton officiating.

Interment was made in the Sand Hill Cemetery, Bushkill.

Pallbearers were William Schoonover, Sterling Schoonover, Horton Stettler, Harold Riedmiller, Oscar Dippre and Miller Smith.

Six State Senators, Seven House Members Decide Against Running For Reelection

HARRISBURG (AP)—An unusually large number of state senators don't plan to seek another term this year.

With 25, or half, of the seats at stake, six senators passed up a try for another term.

One of the six, Douglas H. Elliott, Chambersburg Republican, is trying for a seat in Congress.

In the House, seven members decided not to run again, bringing the total legislators not seeking reelection to 13. Ten of them are Republicans.

All 28 congressmen filed for a new term.

The deadline for entering the primary was Tuesday. The candidates have until March 1 to withdraw if they desire.

The legislators not seeking reelection, besides Elliott, are:

State Reps. George W. Cooper (Allegheny) (15th); Ruth S. Donahue (Clinton); Clarence Stoner, Cumberland; Paul G. Murray, Lancaster (1st); John Light, Lebanon, and William E. Brown, Chester (1st), Republicans, and J. P. Moran, Allegheny (16th), Democrat; State Sens. G. Robert Watkins, Delaware; Ernest F. Walker, Cambria and C. Arthur Blass, Erie, Republicans, and Frank W. Ruth, Berks, and Joseph M. Barr, Allegheny, Democrats.

Watkins is now a Delaware County commissioner and Barr is mayor of Pittsburgh.

Four House members, meanwhile, will try for the State Senate.

John H. Devlin (D-Allegheny) is a candidate to succeed Burr; Gus Yatron (D-Berks) is after Ruth's seat; Philip J. Lopresti (D-Cambria) is running for Walker's seat, and Harvey P. Murray (R-Snyder) is running against Sen. Samuel B. Wolfe of Lewisburg for the GOP nomination for the Northumberland-Snyder-Union district.

Three Opponents

Besides Murray, Wolfe has three other opponents for the nomination.

Yatron is in a three-way fight for the Democratic nomination in the Berks senatorial district and Lopresti, organization choice, has former Sen. John J. Haluska as opposition in his party's primary. Devlin is unopposed.

Another senatorial nominating fight involves incumbent John Carl Miller and two other Democrats in the Beaver-Lawrence district.

Four House Democratic leaders will have primary fights for nominations to another term. These are Stephen McCann, floor leader from Greene County; Speaker H. G. Andrews of Cambria County; Appropriations Chairman J. Dean Polen of Washington County, and Robert Wheeler Jr., Ways and Means Committee chairman from Fayette County.

Two Nominations

There are eight candidates for two nominations in Polen's district. The other Washington County district has nine candidates for two seats in the Democratic primary.

Andrews, McCann and Wheeler have only one opponent in their districts.

Another fight arousing interest is York County's first district where Democrats allied with former Gov. George M. Leader are trying to unseat John R. Gailey, Democratic county treasurer, in the primary. Two independents also are opposing Gailey.

College Places Restrictions On Initiations

INDIANA, Pa. (AP) — Physical and mental punishment during fraternity initiations was outlawed Monday at Indiana State College.

Dr. Willis E. Pratt, president of the college, issued the order.

He said his administration "has studied many problems of college fraternities and has found one of the worst features to be some unnecessary, even though infrequent, foolish use of punitive measures imposed upon young fraternity initiates."

Dr. Pratt said these practices "have no place in a civilized and cultured society and have no constructive part in a higher education program."

Scott Not Taking Part In Contest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa) said Wednesday he won't engage in a contest for the chairmanship of the Pennsylvania Republican delegation to the Republican National Convention.

But he didn't take himself out of the running for the chairmanship. He said it will be up to the delegates to decide who they want as their chairman at the convention, to be held in Chicago in July.

Several other Pennsylvania Republicans have been mentioned for the chairmanship, including former Sen. Edward Martin, State Sen. Harvey Taylor and State GOP Chairman George Bloom and others.

Matthews and Owen's Marks Bring Calls

To settle two arguments that brought phone calls to the Daily Record Wednesday night.

Eddie Mathews of the Braves was the National League homerun king last season. Mathews hit 46 round trippers, one more than Ernie Banks of the Cubs.

Both players were tied at the end of the regular season but Mathews got two extra chances when the Braves played the Dodgers in a best of three series for the pennant. Mathews hit his 46th homerun in the final playoff game.

Century Mark Held By Eight Sprinters

And to answer the Jesse Owens question, before the ten spot changes hands. Owens does not hold the 100-yard dash mark.

That record is held by Mel Patton, Jim Golliday, Leamon King, Dave Sime, Bobby Morrow, Ray Norton and Bob Woodhouse, all of the United States and H. D. Hogan of Australia. All ran the century in 9.3 seconds.

Owens' best time was a 9.4 clocking, which he turned in as a senior in high school in 1933. It is the National Interscholastic record. A James Jackson of California, tied the record in 1954.

This could be the year that Mickey Mantle decides to do all of the hitting from the port side of the plate.

Mantle had his worst season with the Yanks since 1954 when he hit only 27 homers and batted an even .300 in 1959.

This year Mantle hit 31 round trippers and hit .285, his lowest figure in eight years with the Yanks.

Mantle batted .291 from the left side and 2.66 from the right, last season and in homeruns, it was 23 left, six right. Here is the complete run down on Mantle's two-sided 1959 performance.

	AB	R	H	2B	3B	HR	RBI	BB	SO	BA

Marin Says Marr's Swing Looks Like Snead's

Freddie Martin (not the band leader), the man who discovered Sam Snead, says Dave Marr, the young touring pro, has the swing that comes closest to matching Snead's "perfect swing."

Martin, who heads the golfing end of Snead's home course, "The Greenbrier" in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., also claims he knew Snead would be a great champion the first time he saw him swing a club. Snead was 16-years-old at the time.

And there is a story circulating that Polk Twp. High School will have a tough time getting basketball officials next season.

It seems the area whistle tooters want to get paid for refereeing the ball games not the fights.

Moves Into Second

Jenkins Gains Ground In Olympic Figure Skating

By TED SMITS

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—Russia and Finland split gold medal honors at the Winter Olympics Thursday and America's Dave Jenkins moved into position to win the figure skating crown last won by his brother, Hayes.

Jenkins, from Colorado Springs, closed ground in compulsory figures on Karel Divin of Czechoslovakia, former European champion. Most experts felt that in Friday's free style skating — Jenkins' specialty — he will surpass the Czech.

Viktor Kosichkin, a 22-year-old electrician from Moscow, won the 5,000-meter speed skating title with a brilliant 7 minutes 51.3 seconds. Knut Johannesen of Norway was second in 8:00.8 and Jan Presman of The Netherlands third with 8:05.1.

Closes Gap

The veteran Finnish skiler, Veikko Hauulinen, made up 20 seconds on his leg of the 40-kilometer (25.8 miles) men's relay ski race and then outfought Hakon Brusvtz of Norway in the stretch to win by a few ski strides. The Finnish team was timed in 2 hours, 18 minutes 45.6 seconds. Norway was clocked in 2:18:46.4. Russia was third in 2:21:21.6.

The United States finished last in the 11-team field.

Jenkins performed so well on the last two of his five compulsory figures that he took over second place in the standings from Alain Giletti of France and cut Divin's lead.

Brown Fifth

The standings were: Civin 797.7, Jenkins 775.2 and Giletti 761.7.

Don Jackson of Canada, a spectacular free skater, was fourth in the standings, followed by Tim Brown of Sacramento, Calif.

Russia, with the team title already won, piled up 17 points in the day's two finals while the United States drew a blank.

Russia now leads in the unofficial team standings with a total of 137 points based on 10 for first and 5, 4, 3, 2, 1 for the other places. The Russians have six gold medals — twice as many as Germany, which is second in points with 52½.

The United States held third place with 44 points, followed by Sweden 42, Norway 32½, Austria 30, Finland 30, Switzerland 25, France 20, Italy 15½, Canada 13, Poland 13, The Netherlands 11, Japan 6½, and Czechoslovakia 3.

Set Goal In Everything, Speaker Advises Pupils

"IT IS MUCH easier to attain a large goal through a series of smaller objectives, than trying to reach the goal in one leap," Daily Record Sports Editor Curt Prins told an audience of basketball players, cheerleaders and high school officials last night.

Speaking at the annual basketball banquet of the Monroe County Scholastic League, at the West End Firehouse at Brodheadsville, Prins told the group that "they should set a goal in everything they undertake, whether it be a basketball game, or an exam."

Basketball teams from Polk, Tobyhanna, Coolbaugh, Pocono, Chestnuthill and Barrett high schools, along with the teams' cheerleaders, coaches and principals, attend the event.

Trophies Presented

The Daily Record Trophy, given to the winner of the league, was presented to Tobyhanna Twp. High. The school also received a trophy for winning the junior varsity basketball title.

Prins highlighted his talk by telling the story of Gene Shue, the National Basketball Assn. all-star guard, who achieved stardom after a poor start in basketball by setting standards to be obtained in every game he played.

"He didn't make the goals too big," Prins said, "To lessen the chance of a disappointment."

League Capable

He closed by saying that the "Monroe County League is capable of playing as good basketball as any league in the area, if the boys spend more time on fundamentals."

Other coaches who attended the banquet, were Al Shollenberger, Barrett; Sam Everitt, Coolbaugh; Bill Frear, Chestnuthill, and Harry Werkheiser, Pocono Twp. Art Smith, Polk coach, was unable to attend.

High School Cage Round-Up

Abington Takes 26 Years But Finally Wins League Crown

By FRED WALTERS

HARRISBURG (AP)—Abington High School has finally won its league basketball championship after 26 years of trying.

The new Suburban I Dist. 9 champs did it with a 53-50 upset victory over Haverford Tuesday night, reversing their only loss of the season in 19 games.

This is the league normally ruled by Chester. The Clippers are sitting out the season under suspension. Haverford, 1958 state Class A champion, had been favored to succeed to the league throne but Abington changed all that.

Playoffs Next

Abington now prepares for the opening of the Dist. 9 playoffs next week. It will be a strong field with Ridley Twp. (Suburban II), Radnor (Suburban III), Yeadon (Suburban IV), Springfield Twp. (Bux-Mont) other leading contenders. The Ces-Mont representative — either West Chester or Coatesville—remains to be decided.

Add Jenkintown to the list of 1960 district champions. The perennial Dist. 9 Class C titlists have won another—their fifth straight and 7th in 13 years—without need of a playoff. They now await the start of inter-district competition and if the Dist. 3 Class C playoffs develop as expected, it will be Jenkintown versus defending state champion West Reading in the first round.

Danville Wins

Danville wrapped up the Susquehanna League title Tuesday night by beating Sunbury in the second half final. Danville took both half championships and now advances to the Dist. 4 Class A playoffs.

Other new league champions decided this week included Shippensburg of the Blue Muntain League (Dist. 3); Greenwood of Perry-Juniata (Dist. 3); Smithfield-Ridgebury-Ulster of Bradford-Sullivan (Dist. 4); Northern Cambria of Northern Cambria County Sect. B League (Dist. 6); Midland (Sect. VIII); Rostraver (Sect. X), Bridgeville (Sect. XV), W. Newton (Sect. XVII) of the WPIAL; St. Marys of the Allegheny Mountain (Dist. 9); Karns City of Butler County (Dist. 9); Lawrence Park of Erie County (Dist. 10); Pine Grove of South Schuylkill (Dist. 11); Catasauqua, Lehigh Valley (Dist. 11), and Waymart of Wayne County Northern Division (Dist. 12).

Catty Hits 24

Uniontown (23), St. Marys (21), Catasauqua (24, Mahanoy Area (20), remained unbeaten. Shamokin (20) and Nanticoke (22) did not play.

Wyalusing handed Sayre its first Roosevelt Trail defeat in over two years, 65-64.

Other reverals saw Fort Cherry lose to Burgettstown, 57-55; Carbondale lose to West Scranton 64-56; Lock Haven beaten by State College, 53-45; Pittsburgh Fifth Ave. upset by Pittsburgh Schenley, 78-74; Donora stopped by Bellmar, 74-68.

In the top Class B game in the WPIAL, Wampum tied Union Twp. for the section title, 86-61. The two will playoff now to see who represents the section in the WPIAL playoffs.

Bowling is a Business, too

WORLD'S LARGEST bowling center, 112 lanes at Edison, N.J.

NEW LOOK at a Kansas City Alleys, supervsied nursery.

(EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the fourth in a series of five features on bowling, which today draws millions of devotees of all ages and soon will be climaxed by the World's Series of bowling, the American Bowling Congress tourney in Toledo, O. Others in this series, "BOWLING IS A BUSINESS, TOO," will follow on this page).

BOWLING has prospered because it has become a family sport.

And the reason is simply that the newer establishments have been designed with the family and convenience for each member as the prime target.

No longer is bowling a game only for the men in the back room or cellar of the old-time saloon. The modern emperium is replete with features designed to bring partons into the place and keep them there—nurseries, playrooms for children, shops in some cases, clubrooms and other inducements.

Pay Object

Object, true, is still the customer who bowls a line or two or three, for that pays the freight.

But the musty, smoky bowling hangout of not so long ago is being converted into a family and community recreation center.

Take the world's largest bowling establishment — the 112-lane center owned by Thomas Jr., and James Swales in Edison, N. J.

Meeting Rooms

Put two football fields together lengthwise and you can picture the depth of the 112-lane place. And what do you see? A modern establishment offering special promotions for women bowlers and cut rates for children as well as free meeting rooms for Boy Scouts and teen-agers. A nursery, too, is in the offing.

Orchard Twin Bowl of Skokie, Ill., a $3,000,000 64-lane showplace, employs a full-time sociologist to plan community activities around the bowling lanes; helps produce a weekly teen-age sports radio program, has a nursery with a window looking into the workings of the automatic pinsetters to help keep the children entertained; shops and plush carpeting for its elegant appearance.

Serves Pancakes

Then there's Omaha's Ranch Bowl which turns over its meeting room to a Catholic parish for Sunday mass and serves pancakes to the worshipers after services. On another night one of the meeting rooms is turned over to the 60-piece Omaha Symphony Orchestra for rehearsals.

A barber shop and beauty shop, open 24 hours a day, is a feature of the Dallas Cotton Bowling Palace. The owner is planning a new 110-lane center with a miniature golf course in the middle of it.

The North Kansas City Bowl has an aviary and a full-time bird keeper as well as an art gallery.

More Than Alleys

There's a new 48-lane place planned for Madison, Wis. Plans call for a country club atmosphere which, eventually, will include a swimming pool, rifle, pistol and archery ranges, a skating rink and, of course, meeting rooms.

Free instructions by professionals is a must, of course.

The big item, though, is the nursery so the women can occupy the lanes in the morning and afternoon hours and park the children at the same time.

Last Undefeated Team

Warrior Girls Drop First Game To Gettysburg, 67-59

EAST Stroudsburg State College's girls' basketball team lost its first game in six starts, 67-59 to Gettysburg, last night on the winner's floor.

The locals staged a second quarter rally to take a 32-31 halftime lead but Gettysburg outscored the Warriorettes by eight in the third frame, to take a 51-44 three quarter lead.

In the final quarter, the Bullet girls hit 16 points to East Stroudsburg's 15.

Bad Night

"We just couldn't do anything right," East Stroudsburg coach, Anne Venezia said, following the loss, that saw the school's last undefeated team of the winter season enter the losing column.

Barbara Fenstermaker and Gail Brown scored 49 points for the Bullets, with Fenstermaker the high of the game with 25.

Sandra Brown led the losers with 19. Chris Albright had 13 points and Mary Lou Seacock added 12.

JV Charges To Be Studied

A COMPLAINT, that Parkland High School used eighth-grade players on its junior varsity basketball team this season, is being checked by District II, PIAA.

Ralph Burrows, president of the District, and principal of East Stroudsburg High School, said he is writing a letter to Parkland principal, Fred Meckley, asking him to investigate the allegation, made by an undisclosed source.

Lose Final Year

Under PIAA regulations, eighth grade students may not participate in high school athletics. "If eighth-graders were used by Parkland," said Burrows, they will be ineligible during their senior year."

Burrows also said, that the investigation and its outcome will in no way affect the standings of the varsity teams in the Lehigh-Northampton League. The Parkland varsity finished second in Wilson Boro in the league.

Yanks Score Hockey Upset

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—The U. S. ice hockey team stunned world champion Canada 2-1 Thursday on the great defensive work of goalie Jack McCartan and took the undisputed lead of the Olympic round robin tournament.

With three straight victories, the surprising Yanks had a one-point edge over the defending champion Russians, whom they play Saturday. The Soviets were tied Wednesday night by Sweden 2-2 but beat Germany 7-1 Thursday.

McCartan, from St. Paul, Minn., made 39 saves in the fiercely fought battle before a crowd of 8,500 at Blyth Arena.

Robertson's Lead Cut By Stith

NEW YORK (AP)—Oscar Robertson's lead over Tom Stith of St. Bonaventure in the major college basketball scoring race has been cut to a mere 2.6 points a game, the weekly statistics released by the NCAA Service Bureau showed Thursday.

Through last Saturday's games, Robertson had 759 points in 22 games for a 34.5 average. Stith had 574 points in 18 games for a 31.9 mark. Stith has gained considerable ground on his Cincinnati rival in the past two weeks. Since Feb. 8, the Bonnies' star has averaged 36.8 points a game to only 19.7 for Robertson.

Lucas Most Accurate

Jerry Lucas, Ohio State's brilliant sophomore, continues to set the pace in field goal accuracy with a .637 percentage, while Jack Waters of Mississippi is the free throw leader for the fourth straight week, with .894.

Leroy Wright of College of the Pacific has, just about wrapped up his second straight rebound championship despite a knee injury that probably will keep him sidelined for the remainder of the season. Wright has a .234 mark to .199 for runner-up Dave DeBusschere of Detroit.

Ohio State retained its team offense with 84.2. Iona of New Rochelle, N.Y., took over the top spot in rebounds from Ohio State with .601 to .585 for Cornell and .583 for the Buckeyes.

Over-Emphasis

Educators To Study H. S. Sports

HARRISBURG (AP) — Dr. Charles H. Boehm, superintendent of public instruction, said Thursday the danger of over-emphasizing school sports will be studied in an upcoming statewide study of education.

"The entire picture of sports in our schools will be reappraised," Boehm said, by a special education committee to be named soon by Gov. Lawrence.

"I'm very much for interscholastic sports under appropriate conditions," Boehm said, adding his personal view was that schools should assign top priority to academic and library studies and then apportion reasonable time for developing sports and other extra-curricular programs.

Community Responsibility

"We feel that the over-emphasis that exists is as much the responsibility of the community as anyone else," Boehm said. He said there was particular danger of over-emphasis when small schools tried to compete on a level with larger schools.

He said only one district —Lancaster—has acted so far to curtail weekday night sports activities which some educators claim keep children from their studies.

Beginning next year, Lancaster will restrict weekday night sports activity.

Boehm said that while much of the over-emphasis on extra-curricular activity is in sports, there also are other areas where it prevails.

Quite often the music groups get involved and this is another thing that bothers us," he said. Educators also have criticized schools for taking up too much of the pupil's time for participation in dramatic and other similar activities.

Yank's Mantle Still Unsigned

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Mickey Mantle has not signed his 1960 contract with the New York Yankees and says "I don't think I'll be signed by Monday."

The Yankee infielders and outfielders are due at the club's spring training camp in St. Petersburg, Fla., Tuesday. Technically Mantle would not be considered a holdout unless he failed to take the field with the players Wednesday.

The home run slugger-outfielder and the Yankees so far have played a waiting game.

Only One Game

ONLY ONE high school basketball game is scheduled tonight, as Southern Wayne, winner of only one league game hosts Wallenpaupack. Stroud Union and East Stroudsburg meet in the interborough tilt Saturday at East Stroudsburg.

VA Worker Pays Visit Here Today

ROBERT A. Johnson, contact representative from the Veterans Administration Regional Office, Wilkes-Barre, will visit Stroudsburg today. He will be at the office of the director of veterans affairs, 615 Sarah St., from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Johnson will be available to furnish advice and assistance to veterans and their dependents on all benefits administered by the Veterans Administration. He will also assist them in filing claims for any of these benefits.

On July 1, a new pension law goes into effect which provides increased benefits to veterans and their widows and children. The amount payable depends upon the amount of income they receive from other sources. The law now provides pension benefits for widows and children of deceased World War II and Korean Conflict veterans.

Anyone desiring instructions or assistance in filling out these income questionnaires, as well as any other benefits administered by VA, should contact the VA Representative during his visit to Stroudsburg.

Getting Along With Family Is Youth Problem

BEDFORD (AP) — The number one problem among church youth is "getting along with family and parents," according to a study released by the Pennsylvania Council of Churches Monday.

This study, compiled from a survey of 2,000 church youths, was made public at the Youth Work Consultation Conference for youth leaders from 19 major denominations in the state.

The next two problems confronting youth, the survey said, are "love, sex, dating and marriage," and "inferiority complex, feeling at ease and social poise."

Rev. Chauncey J. Varner of Harrisburg, director of the Department of Youth Work of the council, reported another survey showed that "traditional youth programming in the local church is not reaching many youths within the church's influence."

Your Horoscope Today

By FRANCIS DRAKE

Friday, February 26, 1960

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — This can be a productive and result-getting day if you forget self and personal desires for the general good. Finances, smartly managed business ventures favored.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Your aspects are neither friendly nor discouraging. But it is a day for caution, thoughtful action, restrained ambitions. With smart management, you can gain, however.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — You can have a fruitful and constructive day if you temper enthusiasm with common sense. Then judgment and vision will be sounder, clearer. Don't start too many tasks at once.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — The vibrations are less stimulating for personal interests and seeking favors than they are for business, financial gain. Meet all issues and opposition firmly, reasonably. Plan your day's program early and get a good start.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — It could be hazardous to undertake new ventures of wide scope if they have not been previously studied and investigated. Familiar matters should progress under smart management, however.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Some situations may take extra courage and faith but you won't lose out if you follow your conscience and use your intelligent know-how. Don't strain or undertake too much for one day. Let others do their share.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — By letting small annoyances pass unnoticed, you can cover more ground. A good start and a well planned schedule will reduce red tape, errors, give more time for new ventures.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — A challenging and stimulating day! It should incite your talents for purposeful action, your ability to meet and beat tough situations. But don't underestimate the fighting spirit of others.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Your specific occupation and matters relative to it can advance with your efficient help, management. Be mindful of seemingly unimportant details. Accuracy is important.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — It will take all of your ability and some extra clever management to attain benefits, gains during this somewhat restrictive period. You folks are usually at your best when challenged, however. Show your mettle now.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Concessions won't be made to half-hearted effort, careless promises, slipshod work. Only your very best efforts will produce results now.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Originality and attentive application plus YOUR knowledge and experience will give tasks, undertakings the support they need for you to make the grade this day. You have the gifts; use them.

YOU BORN TODAY are unusually intuitive, artistic, possess diversified talents but sometimes are too reticent to promote them as they deserve. When thoroughly aroused and fired with ambition, you can be truly successful at your specific occupation. You make fine organizers, artists, teachers, lawyers and tradesmen; could succeed in any business where discretion, skill and humane treatement are essential. You like finishing things to a nicety; may be fond of the sea, fishing, dealing in liquids, chemicals, oil, etc.

Unit To Check State Funds Is Selected

HARRISBURG (AP)—The first step in formal organization of the new legislative watchdog committee over state spending was made Tuesday with appointment of members.

Senate President pro tempore M. Harvey Taylor named Republican Sen. Henry M. Propert, Montgomery, and Democratic Sens. Frank W. Ruth, Berks, and Anthony DiSilvestro, Philadelphia.

House Speaker H. G. Andrews picked Republican Reps. W. Stuart Helm, Armstrong, and Norman Wood, Lancaster, and Democrat J. Dean Polen, Washington, House Appropriations Committee chairman.

The leaders of the two houses were required to pick two minority members and a member of the majority party in their respective chambers to keep political balance.

Other members of the group, by virtue of their offices, are Taylor, Andrews, House Democratic leader Stephen McCann, Greene; House GOP leader Albert W. Johnson, McKean; Senate GOP leader James S. Berger, Potter, and Senate Democratic leader Charles R. Weiner, Philadelphia.

The committee was created by the 1959 Legislature and given a $200,000 appropriation for expenses and a staff to keep close watch over state expenditures.

Taylor and Andrews said no date has been fixed for an organization meeting, at which the members will elect officers and define the scope of the committees's duties.

Dr. Powers To Address Local Club

THE Industrial Management Club will meet Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the Penn-Stroud Hotel.

Dr. Eugene Powers will be the main speaker for the night and his subject will be, "Possible College Services to Industry and the Community."

Several outstanding industrial art students from Stroud Union and East Stroudsburg Area Joint High Schools will be guests of the club.

A movie, "Driving Under Adverse Conditions" will be shown for those who wish to remain.

Second Degree To Be Conferred

FATHER Butler Council, Knights of Columbus, degree team will exemplify the second degree Sunday at 4 p.m. in the basement of St. Luke's Roman Catholic Church, Stroudsburg.

All eligible members of Pocono Mountains, Bangor and Father Butler Councils are asked to report at 3:45 p.m. Sunday.

Population of Monaco, better known as Monte Carlo, is 20,422 permanent residents. This does not include transient devotees of games of chance in the gambling casinos.

Puerto Ricans Good Workers Within Their Own Environs

By Ruth B. and James H. Ottaway

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — After spending a week in Puerto Rico — 90 percent of it away from our hotel and its inviting beach and pool — what are our reactions toward its people?

Probably the cruelist thing that has happened to Puerto Ricans has been their migration to New York City and other large eastern cities.

Accustomed to a mild climate, sun, balmy breezes, food almost in the backyard and no need for warm clothing or warm housing, they arrive in New York City with little money and end up in slums.

Many undoubtedly are bewildered.

Many Puerto Ricans are excellent farm workers. Others do well in industry, given the necessary training.

But taken out of their native environment and thrust into a strange city where snow and cold are not uncommon, many are lost. It is no wonder some of the young people end up in gangs.

Education Necessary

More education is needed badly in Puerto Rico. Public schools not only have half-days sessions but often "every-other-day" classes. Church schools are helping to fill this gap and are welcomed by the government.

It's somewhat of an "easy life" morally down here. Prostitution flourishes in Old San Juan. Each hotel has its own gambling casino. Probably San Juan is packed because Cuba is not exactly an inviting place today.

There is virtually no anti-American sentiment that we could discover. No smattering of Castro's "hate America" campaign. The relationship with our country is excellent. There are differences, of course, but not major ones.

(Last in a series of articles by Ruth B. and James H. Ottaway, publishers of The Daily Record, on conditions in Puerto Rico).

Puerto Rico' industrial revolutions is the best answer to raising living standards. It is already paying off. Given jobs, why should any Puerto Rican want to migrate to the U. S.

Greater Strides Possible

There is plenty of room for the 2,200,000 Puerto Ricans. They have a very favorable climate, water, mountains and plenty of flat land.

Our best bet is to help Puerto Rico industrially and agriculturally to enable it to become economically independent.

Great strides have been made in this direction in the past 10 years. "Fomento" — or "Operation Bootstrap" is paying off.

Catechetical Classes To Hold Retreat

STUDENTS of St. Matthew's High School Catechetical Classes will participate in a "day of recollection" and retreat on Sunday at The Villa of Our Lady of the Poconos, Mount Pocono.

Students will assembly at 7:30 a.m. at St. Luke's Church and will be transported to the retreat house. Transportation will be provided.

All students are urged to attend this, the fourth annual day of recollection. Those who have not as yet made arrangements to attend are reminded that they can do so by calling Marie C. Brown, HA 1-8422 or any of the catechetical teachers.

A full day of activities will start with the celebration of Mass in the morning. The day will include, talks on various subjects, discussions and periods of recollection.

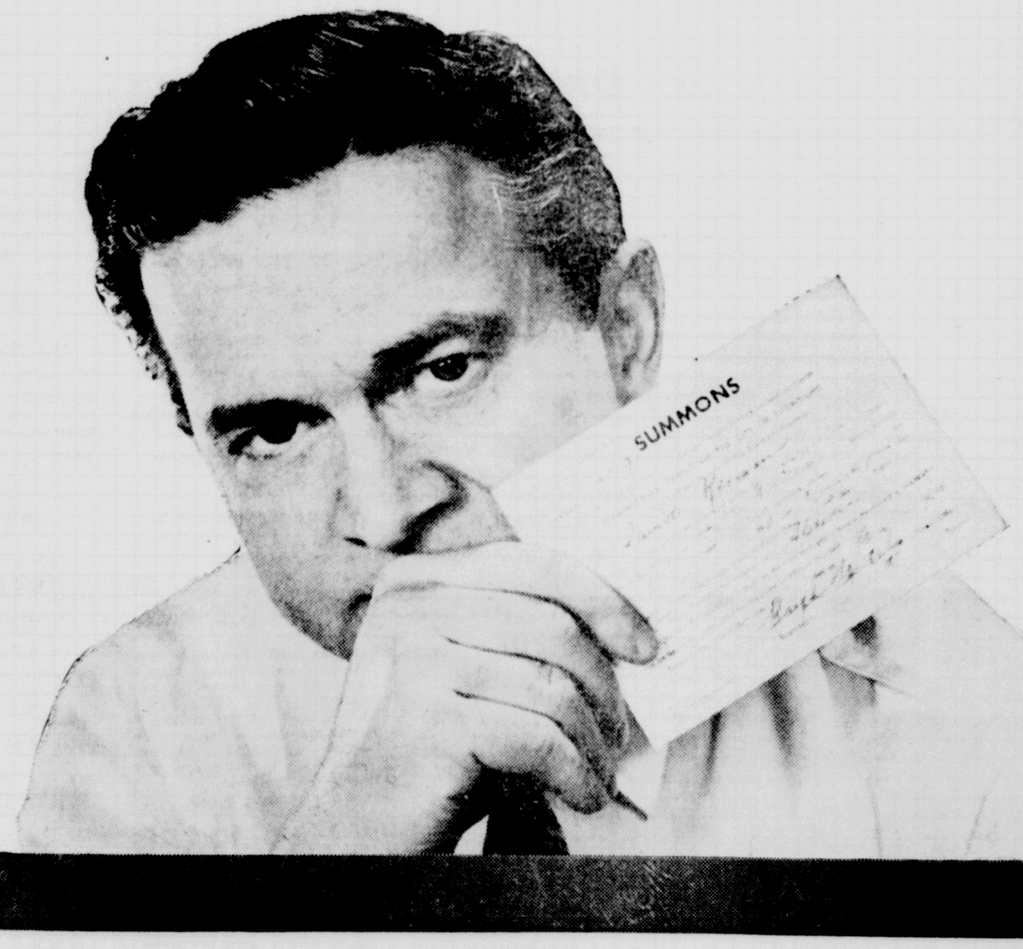
You're lucky you got it!

The officer stopped you because you did something dangerous—something that might have caused a serious accident. Better thank him; he may have saved you from tragedy.

Of course you're a good driver. Almost everybody is—most of the time. But last year, nearly 40,000 Americans died in traffic accidents, most of them killed by good drivers who took just one foolish chance.

So when you get a traffic ticket, think what might have happened—and count yourself lucky!



Help stop senseless killing on our highways. Drive safely yourself.
Insist on strict law enforcement for your own protection.
Work actively with others to support your local Safety Council.
Remember—where traffic laws are strictly enforced, deaths go down.

Signal Corps' 100th Anniversary

Tobyhanna To Celebrate Centennial

FOR THE Tobyhanna Signal Depot the big event this year will be a centennial celebration.

One hundred years ago in an obscure operation in the Southwest, the Army tried out a "secret weapon" against the rebellious Navajo Indians.

It was nothing more startling than sending Morse code messages by flashing mirrors in the sun and using flag signals. But this was the birth of a new branch of the armed forces—the Army Signal Corps.

On June 21, the Corps which today bounces its signals off the moon as a routine procedure, will mark the anniversary with an open house at all its installations around the world.

Year-Long Series

In addition, a year-long series of commemorative events, in which the Tobyhanna Signal Depot will play a significant part, have also been planned.

One of the items being readied by the Office of the Chief Signal Officer in Washington is a gigantic exhibit, tracing the history of the Army Signal Corps through every major U. S. war since 1860. This exhibit, which will be open to the public, is scheduled for a showing in the Pocono Mts. area.

Full-page spreads in Life and other magazines, a coast-to-coast TV show and other spectaculars are also in the works.

While preparations for its role in the upcoming centennial events goes on, it is business as usual at the giant Tobyhanna installation.

Completed in 1953 at a cost of $35,000,000, the depot spreads over a 1,418-acre tract just outside the village of Tobyhanna. Hundreds of jobs for area skilled and unskilled workers were provided during its construction.

Today, the depot employs more than 2,100 civilians and also includes 500 military personnel. Its payroll this year will run to more than $12,000,000. Another $6,000,000 will be spent during the year for local procurements in the region.

Items Purchased

Items purchased will include hardware, ready-mixed concrete, shale, gravel, automotive and electronic parts, coal, diesel fuel and many others. More than 350 firms within a 50-mile radius of the depot will share in this business.

The main mission of the depot is to supply the finest in up-to-date communications and electronics equipment to Army troops stationed in Northeastern United States and Europe.

But equipment rapidly becomes obsolete in the Space Age. Today's big trend is towards miniaturization.

Radios as small as sugar cubes, using a completely new concept of "micro-module" circuits are expected to play an increasingly important role in defense communications.

The micro-module program marks the start of the "cubist" era in electronics. In this new engineering and scientific revolution, the vast range of jobs done by transistors and other electronic parts is being compressed into tiny micro-modules—circuit building blocks measuring only a third of an inch on each side.

Their small size will save critical space and weight in future satellite systems and rockets.

By using mirco-modules, electronic researchers already have achieved a better than ten to one size reduction over today's most refined equipment. In some cases the reduction is 20 to one and further compression is considered likely.

The support of highly mobile, widely-dispersed forces of the modern Army is expected to be simplified by micro-modules. Easy replacement of defective parts in elecronic equipment will also be achieved, along with a reduction in material tonnage, transport and storage space.

Although the developments have been primarily for national defense, micro-modules will eventually find their way into the home. The wall-type television set, its surface determined by size of the viewing tube, will soon be a reality as a result of this new concept.

Little Power

Tests show that the tiny tubes use little power, are highly dependable and long-lived. They are also extremely rugged due to their simplicity and compact shape.

Much of the equipment to be purchased by the Signal Corps in the years ahead will be of micro-module design. Training in the repair of such sets is already in progress at Tobyhanna Signal Depot.

Taking time out for a nostalgic look back at its first hundred years, the U.S. Army Signal Corps, ever alert to the changing nature of modern communications, is ready for its second century of service to the nation.

Realtors Look For Big Demand

POCONO Mountain Real Estate Board members are looking forward to a very strong demand for Monroe County real estate in the Golden 60's.

It is their prediction that these 10 years will see accelerated activity for property of every description as completion of the finest in new highways in and leading to the county. Additional roads now in the final planning stages serve to pin-point Monroe County as an easily reached hub of many various activities not enjoyed by many states.

Attract More

With it's many industries, resort hotels, camps, private summer cottages, private club grounds and winter sports, on numerous state owned lands an even growing number should be attracted to become citizens and property owners in our county.

This growing number should be at a greater pace than any 10 years of the counties previous history.

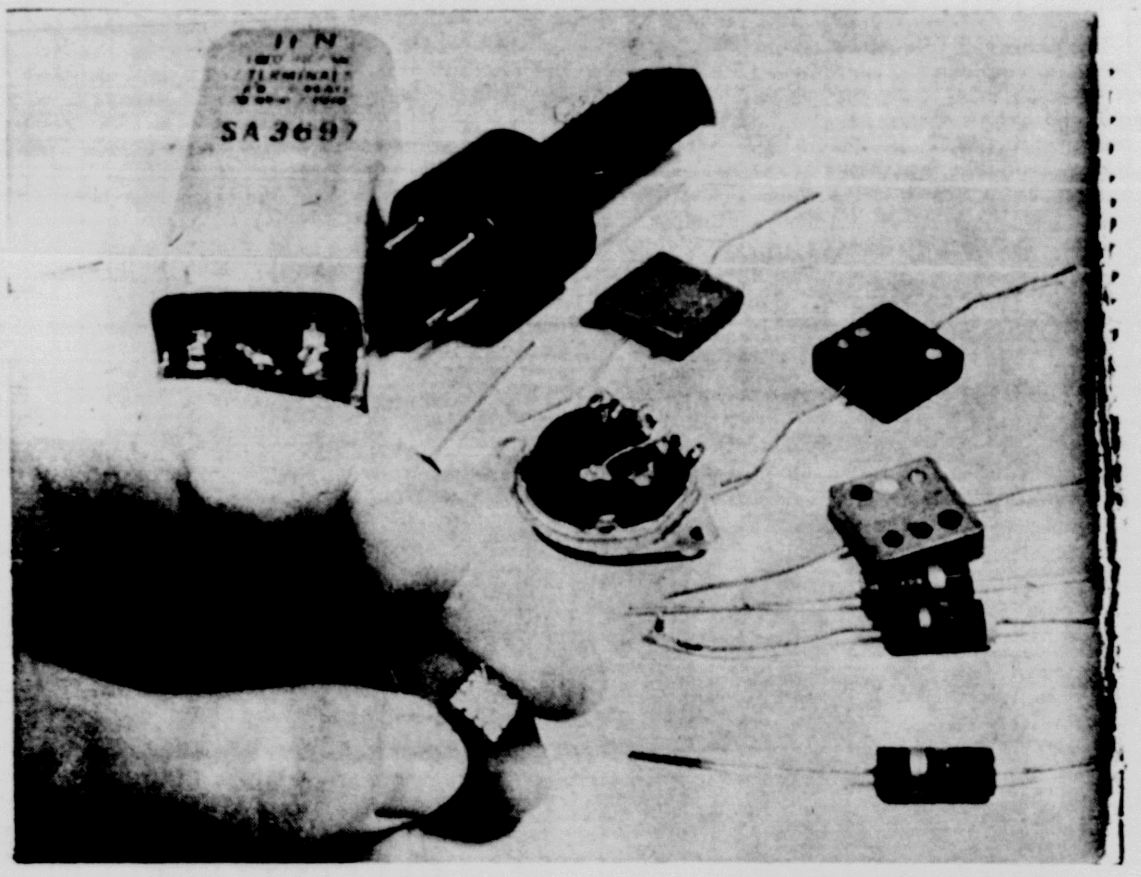
This will create a steady demand for residential type property.

Year Around Homes

An indication of growth and changing times is found in the recent trend of many former lake developments used in the past summer cottages and recreation only now being developed along the lines of year around homes for many families. The Realtors expect this trend will expand in the coming decade.

Another factor in this anticipated demand and growth for county properties is reflected in the available supply of conventional mortgage money to finance these purchases.

It is the opinion of the Real Estate Board members that this will be available as the mortgage money market for Monroe County Real Estate has expanded in recent years.



SPACE-SAVER—Micro-module held between the fingers replaces all the other electronic parts shown.

MORE ROOM FORECAST—This is interior of one of seven huge warehouses at Army Signal Corps Depot in Tobyhanna. With equipment containing micro-modules, less space will be required in the future.

National Growth Is PM's Gain

By Dr. Frank P. Maguire
District Manager
Penna. Employment Service

IT IS CURENTLY popular to classify decades of history by the events which have characterized them. We read of the "Gay Nineties," the "Terrible Thirties" and the "Fabulous Fifties."

As analysts and researchers examine trends and attempt to discern what lies ahead, their periodic predictions range from a conservative expansion of our over-all economy to the attainment of a National prosperity level not heretofore contemplated. Already, references are being made to "Sensational" as characteristic of the sixties.

We do not look for the Utopia implied in some of the predictions for the current decade. We hope, however, that the favorable economic achievements included in the practical outlook approach fulfillment. For such growth and expansion on a National level should carry with it appropriate improvement in the Pocono Mountains area.

Public Appeal

Unquestionably, one of this area's greatest assets is its tremendous public appeal as a recreational and resort area. The thousands of visitors annually attracted to the area contribute substantially to its basic economy through money expended for goods and services.

Supplying these commodities provides work opportunities for thousands of persons year-round, and additional thousands throughout the summer season. Trade and service industries combined, provide more employment in Monroe and Pike Counties than any other single industrial enterprise.

Such employment, as shown by a survey made in September 1959, acounted for approximately 4,200 persons. As the level of the country's economy and prosperity increases, with particular reference to the Eastern Seaboard, improvement is reflected in our resort employment.

In manufacturing, the area is fortunate in having a well diversified group of industries providing regular employment to approximately 4,300 persons. These industries, by virtue of their character, also would share in any measure of economic prosperity which the country may experience.

Contemplated Growth

The contemplated growth of the above-mentioned industrial groups in particular would be reflected in the demand for Bureau services during the years ahead. Our changing population, as well as technological changes, which create many problems of adjustment for both employer and employe, would also be significant factors in our plans for service.

While the public is generally aware of our rapidly increasing population, the changing composition of the labor force is not as well recognized. More women than men are being added to the labor force, and this trend is expected to continue through the latter part of the decade.

A larger percent of young men of employable age, betwen 16 and 24, will be in school or college than in the past. Young men and women in the middle-age group, 35 to 45, will represent a smaller percent of our labor force, while the proportion of older workers will increase during the decade.

From industry's point of view, technological changes will place more emphasis on skills in production jobs with declining demand for unskilled workers.

More Than Doubleed

In the last decade, Job placements by the Bureau of Employment security in the Stroudsburg area more than doubled. Total placements increased from 1,522 in 1950 to 3,699 in 1959. Activities involving employment registration, counseling, and aptitude testing, for our expanding labor force, are also expected to increase.

The Bureau of Employment Security, through its Employment Service, occupies an important position in the employment potential of any community. With an experience acquired in over 20 years of operation in many facets of employment, the Local Office plays an integral part in supporting the economy of the community.

It accomplishes this first by endeavoring to refer the unemployed worker to an employer requiring his services. When the labor market fails to provide jobs which make such referrals possible, the Bureau administers the payment of benefits from the State Unemployment Compensation Fund to those workers out-of-work, through no fault of their own. In addition to providing a temporary means of support for the unemployed worker's family, the payments also help to sustain the purchasing power and the economy of the area.

Particular Significance

The basic labor market information developed by the Bureau is also expected to be of particular significance during the current decade. Such factors as occupational requirements, supply and demand of skilled workers and trainees, and industry staffing patterns are frequently vital issues in the industrial development of an expanding community.

In adition to the Local Office engaged in carrying out the above services, the Bureau maintains an Administrative District Office in Stroudsburg. The District headquarters, directing activities in Stroudsburg, Hazleton, Jim Thorpe, Mahanoy City, Pottsville, Shenandoah, and Tamaqua, will continue to be concerned with assuring continued and effective service to the public in the geographical areas concerned.

Bureau-wise, we confidently look forward to meriting the continued confidence and cooperation of both industry and labor.

Winter Holiday Ideal In Poconos

EASTERN Pennsylvania's Pocono Mountain resort area's strategic location, high altitude recreational facilities and unsurpassed climate each add just the right touch of flavor to a mountain holiday. But the plateau's 12-month operation demands an array of behind-the-scenes talent to insure the success of its far-flung recreational program.

With a total investment approaching the $100,000,000 mark, both public and private facilities are meeting the needs of Pocono visitors. Resort management, anticipating the increasing number of people who have added the winter season as a vacation period, are providing luxury accommodations. Heated swimming pools with south-of-the-border motif are nestled within sight of ski runs.

Liberate Resorts

Snow-making facilities have liberated resorts from a capricious nature, assuring the winter sports fan of his favorite pasttime on borderline days when a few degrees fahrenheit means the difference between have or have not.

The bracing, high-altitude fun is just the right conditioner for hours of evening pleasure relaxing at hearthside by an open fire, or a leisurely dip in a resort pool. And for jaded appetites there's no substitute for honest-to-goodness hunger induced by a day in the mountains exploring the faintly familiar landmarks remembered from a summer holiday. Green valleys have been replaced by sugar coated vistas and plunging streams have been transformed to outsized strings of pearls.

Eyeing Fairways

But already the golfing fraternity is eyeing the fairways quizzically. In a matter of weeks the first robins will be the excuse for dusting off the putter and going through the ritual of getting the kinks out of the left elbow.

In a year-end report on public lands and their use by Pocono visitors, the Pennsylvania Department of Forest and Waters released some impressive figures. An estimated one and one-half million people made use of state parks and forests during the year just ended. Ranging from a short hike through the Tarkill Forest Demonstration area, to an extended camping expedition, vacationers roamed the Plateau area to find fun, information and recreation abundantly available.

In a word of caution, the Department pointed out that carelessness on the part of a few individuals was responsible for a high percentage of the 46 fires that occurred during 1959. In an area that depends so heavily on its natural resources, it noted that every effort should be made to keep the Poconos green.

On the plus side, the 66 miles of trout streams and the 10 lakes and ponds administered as State Park and State Forest lands, were seeded with 50,248 fish of various sizes and species.

Ice Fishing

At present the Plateau's well watered sporting areas are enjoying one of their finest seasons of ice fishing. Record-sized pickerel catches have recruited many warm-weather followers of Izaak Walton, with hot coffee and tip-ups sharing the action. On the larger ponds the picture is reminiscent of an Eskimo village transplanted to the Poconos.

In an all-out effort to provide public waters with the best possible sport fishing conditions, the Fish Commission has embarked on its most ambitious stocking program in recent years. With the spring season just beyond the further bend, it's time to take stock of fishing gear for the big ones that got away last season.

With many of the area hotels and lodges now operating on a year-round basiis, accommodations are available for a week or a week-end of mountain fun. And with the spring season just over the horizon it's time to begin planning a holiday.

PP&L Passed 2-Billion Mark

RESIDENTIAL customers of Pennsylvania Power & Light Company passed the two billion kilowatt-hour mark in use of electricity in 1959, it has been reported by Charles E. Oakes, P. P. & L. board chairman and chief executive officer.

Mr. Oakes said the utility's residintial customers have doubled their power use since 1952 when the one billion kilowatt-hour level was reached. In that same period, average annual use of electricity by residential customers in the company's service area went from 1,946 kilowatt-hours to 3,238 kilowatt-hours. Average use was 283 in 1924, the earliest year for which statistics are available.

Increases in electric use have similarly been made by the company's other classes of customers. Mr. Oakes said the tremendous increase in annual power use over the past 35 years reflects the widespread electrification of industry, providing greater output and higher wages, and the modernization of homes, schools and farms and better-lighted and more vigorous communities and commercial enterprises. He also pointed out that the amount of electricity used by all of the utility customers is a good indicator of the standard of living and productivie capacity of an area.

Te meet the continually increasing needs of its customers, PP&L's five-year expansion budget, 1960-1964, is $160 million during which time another 300,000 kilowatts of generating capacity will be added to the local utility's system.

Big Lead

"Despite the ever-increasing use of electric power in this country," Oakes said, "there have been recent statements inferring that the United States would soon fall behind Russia in the production of electricity. Actually, our country's lead over the Soviet Union in electric power supply is very substantial. The United States produces more power than the next seven countries of the world combined and is the first ranking nation in the production of electricity. Russia is the second ranking nation. Indications are that this nation's present lead over Russia will increase from 124 million kilowatts of generating capacity to 134 million kilowatts by 1965."

Mr. Oakes said that the electric industry in America is probably in the best position to know what is happening in the area of electric production in the Soviet Union. He said an up-to-the-minute, comprehensive report of conditions in Russia was released Tuesday, Feb. 16, by a team made up of high-level members of America's electric industry which recently completed a tour of major Soviet power facilities. These touring Americans held lengthy discussions with Russian electric officials to get an even more thorough understanding of that country's situation and plans for the future. This latest tour of the Communist country was a follow-up to a similar tour conducted by American electric industry representatives in 1958. Both tours were made under the auspices of Edison Electric Institute and the Association of Edison Illuminating Companies, both trade organizations of investor-owned utilities.

Compares Power

The Edison Electric Institute has reported the findings of these electric utility experts in a publication entitled "A Report On USSR Electric Power Development —1958-1959" which contains a comparison of power developments in Russia and those in the U. S. It is based on what the two groups of electric industry executives saw and on the extensive information provided them during their tours of the USSR.

The PP&L board chairman is an active member of Edison Electric Institute and is now serving as chairman of the association's Power Capacity and Pooling Committee, and is close to the line of these events and subsequent findings.

"The report just released on Russia today," Mr. Oakes said, "shows that at the end of 1959, the Russians had electric power facilities capable of generating 59 million kilowatts. By way of comparison, the United States had facilities capable of generating 183 million kilowatts.

Nearly One Fifth

"Russia's capability comes into better perspective when you consider that the Pennsylvania-New Jersey - Maryland Interconnection alone has facilities capable of producing nearly one-fifth the power that can be produced in the entire Russian nation and yet in land area represents only one-half of one percent of all of Russia. This interconnection is made up of PP&L and seven neighboring utilities and is just a small part of the vast American electric utility industry of more than 400 companies."

Mr. Oakes said the true picture of electric use in this country as compared to Russia can be seen in the annual per capita use of electric power. The United States had a per capita use of 4,481 kilowatt-hours last year, while the USSR showed a figure of 1,161 kilowatt-hours, he said. The difference in the per capita use of electric power, Mr. Oakes said, reflects both the immeasurably different standards of living in the two nations and the low level of electrification of industry in the Soviet Union.

The production of consumer goods for the Russian people is very low since the USSR is concentrating practically all of its power in the heavy industry field. In sharp contrast, the use of electricity in the U. S. for the consumer goods segment of industry is very large.

While the United States presently holds a substantial lead in total generating capacity, forecasts indicate that the difference will widen even further in the years ahead. For example, in the next six years alone, our country will build more than the total electric capacity Russia now has in service and 17 percent more than the added capacity of the Soviet's plan to build in the same period. This will bring this country's total electric power capacity to 245 million by 1965, while Russia's total will be about 110-112 million kilowatts.

Banking Buildup In 60s Seen Easier

Forecasts Not Timid Or Fearful

by John Watt

PREDICTING accurately and positively what tomorrow's commercial bank and its services will be like requires an extremely strong crystal ball. Consumer banking is closely related to what tomorrow's consumer will be like. If we can anticipate him, the problem of building our banks for the Sixties will be considerably easier.

The Sixties are already one of the most perverted and predicted decades in history. If there is any characteristic of the predictions to date, it must be that the business economist is not timid or fearful. Almost without exception, these men have a deep confidence in the long term growth of the United States economy.

Banking is a large industry with many facets. In discussing its outlook we must limit the scope of our comments to a phase of it. If we did not do so, we would necessarily have to write a book on the subject. Consequently, this report hems only on the impact of the principal natural forces on the retail phase of banking, its service and its growth prospects during the Sixties.

Principal areas affecting the services which may be required are: (1) trends of population, (2) outlook for national economy, (3) principal changes in habits of people as their standard of living rises, resulting in different consumer desires and patterns of economic behavior.

An increased population, and expanding economy and changes in consumer buying habits, are no assurances that commercial banks will get a greater share of the financial market, even though their volume may increase over the present. Therefore, the fourth and most important area affecting banking's consumer business of the Sixties is commercial banking's attention to the development of a marketing plan.

Population

The census bureau maintains that our population is about 180,000,000. The number of households is presently about 50,000,000. By 1970 the number of households may reach 61,000,000 and from that point on for some years households may grow at a rate of 1.2 million a year.

Study of population mixture seems to support the view that there will be a continued rise in the size of families. Without going further into the population subject—everything seems to point to these facts: 1. Total annual birth rate will be high; 2. marriages will continue at a higher rate; 3. Children will come early and in higher numbers per family; 4. Life span will be longer. The significance of the future size and makeup of population, as well as its effort on a wide variety of consumer purchases in the total market place is obvious.

Increased Productivity

Many experts feel that a three percent increase in gross national production each year is not unlikely. This rise in productivity will be accompanied by higher incomes which will result in a desire and demand for more and better goods and services. Incomes in productivity, due to a combination of the application of labor, automation, research and scientific management, will mean sharp changes in purchasing power and consumption desires of people.

Changing Character of Consumer

Another factor influencing banking's marketing policies is the change taking place in Mr. Consumer. He will have more money to use, he will be in a larger family unit and be seeking more goods of higher quality. He will be a better educated man. Because he is better educated he will be more selective in his choice of goods and services and his demands will be far more substantial.

Accompanying expansion of the economy is a changing face of the American community. A scattering out has taken place in industrial locations. These moves have forced a relocation of the workers manning the plants. This radical shifting will continue in the sixties and will dictate sharp changes in commercial banks' methods of serving their customers. One particular characteristic of this fanning out of the cities into suburbs is the shopping center—another is the outmoding of political boundary lines in the marketing of goods and services including banking services.

Many states are reviewing their banking laws which define or limit the market area served by various types of financial institutions. More than likely this will result in some increase in banking offices in the areas through changes in state laws.

In some areas of the United States the population is always on the move. The necessity to reach and sell these changing markets in the new homes is obvious. Characteristic of the suburban population is a "family living" atmosphere, with improved living standards, changes in shopping habits, catered to by community, supermarket type centers.

It is this atmosphere of dynamic growth that commercial banking will be marketing its consumer banking services in the Sixties. The changes which will take place in these services, the new ones added (perhaps some old ones discontinued) are impossible to accurately forecast. But it is safe to say that to the degree that commercial banking develops its marketing plans to meet the changes in the economy and markets of the Sixties, to that degree will it earn its share in the movement.

In summary we can say this about the market,

1. It will be an expanding one.
2. It will be on the move.
3. It will be more sophisticated and selective.
4. It will be younger and less tied to the traditional.
5. It will have more income available for goods and services.

It is in this atmosphere of expanding economy and fast growing population that commercial banking will be competing for retail banking services in the 1960's.

Not many new banking services will be added but there is no doubt that there will be changes in some of the present services for a variety of reasons—chief amoung them being automation, and the adoption of more aggressive sales methods. Services will be presented more attractively, more profitably, less expensively and to larger groups of people. Changes will be made to make services more appealing and in tune with age group and habit patterns of the market.

Commercial banks will continue to sell deposit services, savings and checking but the packaging of these services will receive much more attention than they have in the past. Drive-in and Walk-up facilities will be expanded. Hours, architecture, installment banking, activity changes, ready-credit, charge it plans, banks will analyze all of these as they may relate to the market and will attempt to develop specific, concrete plans to get their rightful share of it.

FIRST PHASE OF STROUDSBURG THRUWAY OPEN—A vehicle moves along the first phase of the Stroudsburg Thruway from Delaware Water Gap to East Stroudsburg. The second and third phases connecting the initial work are currently under construction by the J. H. Beers, Contractor, of Bangor. These highway connecting points will eliminate many traffic problems in the Stroudsburgs and Monroe County and knit together a state-wide and nation roads program that will link the east with the west and the north with the south. Such highways leading from the George Washington Bridge, Philadelphia, Sharon and other points will focus attention on the Poconos.

Monroe County Is Served By Top Electric Producers

MONROE County is in the highly enviable position of being served by two of the nation's largest producers of electricity.

They are the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. and the Metropolitan Edison Co.

Both have their own massive networks of generating plants strategetically placed in the areas they serve. They are capable of producing several million kilowatts of electricity.

Equally important in the event of an emergency is the fact that both utilities are partners in the Pennsylvania-New Jersey-Maryland Interconnection. This is a combine of eight major power companies, with a total of 67 generating plants, whose lines are interconnected to provide alternate sources of supply.

Among Members

Philadelphia Electric Co., Consolidated Edison and New Jersey Power and Light Co. are numbered among the other members of the interconnection.

Both local power companies maintain industrial development departments which have been instrumental in bringing new industries into Eastern Pennsylvania. Their district managers also cooperate closely with such organizations as the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce in negotiating for new plants.

County Minerals Are Non-Metallic

THE MINERAL resources in Monroe County are non-metalic. Occupancy for more than 250 years has failed to disclose ores of metals except iron.

It is doubtful if there are commercial quantities of the silieeous brown hematite, bog iron ore, and ochre which have been discovered.

Business Associations

EACH OF the communities which make up the Stroudsburgs has a businessmen's association which, in addition to maintaining top standards of merchandising, take an active part in municipal and civic affairs.

Safety Is Aim Of State Roads Dept.

USE OF RIGHT shoulder guide lines for greater safety on the nation's highways has jumped 21 per cent since the end of 1958, a newly-completed survey of state highway officials reveals.

Total miles of reflectorized pavement edge markings utilized to reduce traffic fatalities and lower maintenance costs has increased to 90,600 from some 50,000 at the end of last year.

Forty-two of the 50 states participated in the survey; only nine indicated they do not yet employ edge markings as a low-cost, easily-accomplished safety measure. Thirteen road administrators announced increases in edge markings which ranged from 25 to 3,500 road miles.

Advantages of guide lines cited by highway officials ranged from beter lane placement during low visibility conditions to reduced maintnanc on shouldrs. Enthusiasm for edge markings extends beyond public officials, the survey showing public reaction is highly favorable. One state credited guide lines with a 15 per cent reduction in accidents. In this area the public has urged officials to extend the program.

Less Damage

Another state reported "less damage to bridges and a low accident rate on previous high accident locations" since installing the marking in a test area.

Our own Pennsylvania Highways Department is progressing rapidly in its program of painting the white lines along the edges of the state's multiple-lane highways with a minimum width of 20 feet. However, highways of narrower width and with an exceptionally high accident rate will come in for consideration in the program.

Several hundred miles of roads have been painted since the edge-marking project was started last summer. It is expected that by the end of this year at least half of the state's highways of 20 feet width or greater will have been covered.

$100 Per Mile

State highway officials report it costs about $100 a mile to paint the stripe on a two lane highway. There are no available estimates of the total cost of the project.

Painting is being done first on those roads with records of serious traffic accidents. State Highways Department district offices have been instructed to concentrate first on roads which have been plagued by fog or have other hazards.

Work will speed up in the spring. New equipment has been ordered to simplify and accelerate the line painting job.

Reinhardt Co. High On Sixties

J. A. REINHART and Co. of Mountainhome, views the coming decade as "The Golden 60's", indeed.

The past 10 years have been a period of steady growth and progress. During these "Fabulous Fifties," the company has grown in size from 2400 to 8400 square feet, and has increased its personnel to 45 full time employees. Much new equipment; consisting of engraving machines and quality control gear, has been purchased. Its present quantity of 18 steadily operating engraving machines and accessories, make it one of the largest and most modern engraving job shops in the East.

Supply Work

Of course, good customers are required to supply the work for this equipment. Large companies, engaged in producing missiles, rockets, guidance and warning systems for U. S. space and defense programs, look to Reinhardt's to furnish many component instrument parts for their complex assemblies. Among these will be found General Electric, Western Electric, R.C.A., Bendix, Westinghouse, I.B.M., and many other manufacturers of electronic and mechanical equipment.

The continued production of Bank signs and calendars, now known as "Bankaids", also adds to the busy schedule maintained here at Mountainhome.

A new sales program, designed to widen present territory, and acquire new customers is already underway, and looks very promising.

Foresee Growth

"The Golden Sixties" are anticipated as bringing even greater growth to the company, than the past decade. New advances in space penetration indicate that the only limit is the universe itself. With this in mind, the Reinhardts are preparing to meet the demand for increase standards of production, which the future is sure to bring.

Pocono Center Peers Forward

WITHIN THE decade of 60's, the Pocono Art Center plans to build a permanent center devoted to the arts. Leaders envision a large modern center, designed with a central gallery for exhibitions and a small theater for drama and concerts with wings, like the spokes of a wheel, springing out to house all the workshops, a permanent museum and a library devoted to the arts.

They have already been offered the land and if the energy and drive which launched the group continues, they might just make the vision come true.

Organized less than a year ago, on May 1, 1959, the Pocono Art Center membership climbed to 200 within the first nine months. They h ave started classes in painting, sculpture, ballet, writing, puppetry, and crafts.

Sponsored Lectures

They have sponsored lectures on architecture, poetry and modern music.

They have invited the public to seven exhibitions of paintings, and in their most recent venture have started an art class in cooperation with the Barrett Community Club.

Purpose Spelled Out

The declared purpose of the center is :

To found a center where professional and amateur artists may gather to discuss, demonstrate, exhibit and practice the arts;

To extend an opportunity for the talented child and adult to experience, explore and practice the arts in many fields; and

To fill the need for adult education on a cultural level with lectures on the theatre, music, painting, sculpture, crafts, dance architecture, fashion, interior decoration, antiques, literature and poetry.

It is an ambitious program.

Art Exhibitions Offered

It began last summer at the Indian Queen Hotel where three exhibitions were offered.

The first was the work of elementary and high school pupils from both towns from which they awarded ten scholarships for talented exhibitors to attend painting classes at the Pocono Art Center.

An exhibition of International Art, with works lent by the government of countries throughout the world and by leading New York City galleries, to show the work of outstanding painters from each country. This exhibition received national recognition through the Associated Press.

The third show consisted of selected paintings by six artists from the local area.

When the Indian Queen was returned to use as a dormitory for college students, the Art Center moved to its present headquarters on the third floor over the J.C. Penney store on Main Street in rooms provided by A. B. Wyckoff.

The new quarters offer a gallery for exhibits, and the art center has sponsored five special exhibits.

The first was on photography with Jesse Weiss exhibiting. The second featured the works of the late Cullen Yates, N. A., with paintings loaned from private collections. Other exhibitions featured the work of Peter Heiden; and of Dr. Claus Jordan, Otto Christ and Henry Evans.

They also presented a three-week exhibit of paintings done by the children in the painting class.

Cultural "Conversations"

In launching their "Conversations," the group has ventured into the lecture field on other subjects.

Fred Severud, New York architect, presented an authoritive analysis of architecture and answered questions raised by the audience.

John Seton, a Prix-de Rome composer, lectured on contemporary music.

Dr. T. E. Terrill, head of the English department of State College, East Stroudsburg, devoted an evening to reading poetry.

Professional artists formed a panel on Art Education.

Workshops Working

The workshops were organized to offer opportunities for practical application of the arts.

Already in operation are workshops on the Ballet, a Little Theater Group, a writer's workshop; and painting and craft classes in china painting.

Within the next few months, the group is preparing permanent workshops with studios where they will offer the crafts of pottery, mosaics, tin, enameling, metal and jewelry making, weaving, woodblocking batik dyeing, stenciling, wood working and wood and stone carving, plus the graphic arts such as poster lettering, book binding, etching and dry point.

In their long range projects, the group is encouraging a community orchestra and hopes to present chamber music recitals, trios, quartets, and group singing of madrigals and folk songs.

Scholarships For Talented

For the children, they hope to offer specialized subjects in art not offered by the public schools. They are preparing a pilot project to help the gifted children of the community by offering them early and intensive training in the various art fields.

Already functioning are two ballet classes as well as classes in painting, crafts and puppetry. The puppet class has presented a play which was written, acted and presented by the children.

They hope to offer scholarships of their own, and to help children secure scholarships for advanced studies in fields where they have shown creative talents.

Weiler Brush Has Warm Spot For Pocono Mountains

WEILER Brush Co. represents three generations of brush making experience—the original plant was erected in 1898 by the father of Karl E. Weiler, now president of the company.

In 1957 the factory which has been operating in Franklin Square, Long Island since 1944 was too small so the business moved to Cresco as Mr. Weiler had long held a warm spot in his heart for the beautiful Pocono Mountains which reminded him of his childhood home.

Every Type

The firm manufacturers every type of industrial brushes and has pioneered in developing the special types used in the manufacture of jewelry and the maintenance of oil and gas pipe lines. Their products range in size from about the size of a dime to the type used in cleaning the "Big Inch" line which is thirty six inches in diameter.

When the operation started at Cresco, there were thirty employees—this number has now doubled and as the work is steady throughout the entire year, the resulting payroll has had a very beneficial effect on the economy of the area.

Plans Complete

Plans are complete for an addition to the building this Spring which will provide additional office and storage space as well as placing some of the equipment to better advantage. Further expansion is assured as the sales engineering department is constantly engaged designing new items for firms that are having problems they believe a brush will solve and the entire staff is trying to develop more ways in which their products can be used.

The Company has grown by serving a diversified group of industries and as the economy of our country grows and the great highways for this section are built, it is certain that this concern operating "In the Heart of the Poconos" must continue to thrive.

First Settlers French Descent

FIRST settlers in Monroe County came into the Shawnee Valley from Ulster County, N. Y. and were of French descent.

Leaving their home community, the small band worked their way along the Old Mine Road from Kingston on the Hudson to the Pahaquarry Copper Mines in Warren County, N. J. This occurred before 1700.

ME Jetting Golden 60s Goalward

Spending $100 Million On Projects

"TO HELP the Middle Delaware Valley attain its goal of making the coming decade the 'Golden Sixties', Metropolitan Edison Co., is spending $100,000,000 for new electrical facilities in this area," Richard E. Dreas, manager of Meco's Eastern Division, announced yesterday.

Included in the few facilities are a new generating station along the Delaware River south of Portland, an enlarged network of high voltage transmission lines in Northampton, Bucks, Monroe and Pike counties and an improved distribution system. Meco spent $52,000,000 on this work during the past ten years and expects to spend another $48,000,000 during the coming three years to complete what Dreas terms, "one of the finest electrical systems in the country."

Hub of Network

Hub of the entire network is the Portland Generating Station which began operating in October 1958. The first 154,000 KW unit cost $31,000,000 and another $40,000,000 will be spent to add a 230,000 KW unit to the plant. Construction is scheduled to begin April 1.

High voltage lines constructed during the past five years, carry power from Portland to North Bangor, East Stroudsburg, Belfast and Easton from where it is distributed to all parts of Meco's service area. Substantial sums will be spent in increasing the number of these transmission lines to handle the electricity produced by the second Portland unit.

The availability of this large supply of power places the entire area in an unusually good position to offer both present and prospective industries a virtually unlimited supply of economical electricity, Dreas pointed out. He said that an additional advantage is the fact that Meco's facilities are tied in with those of other utilities in Pennsylvania and New Jersey by means of a "Kilowatt Turnpike", which provides a means of transporting electricity from Lake Erie to the Atlantic Ocean in much the same way the Pennsylvania and New Jersey turnpikes handle heavy motor traffic. This "Kilowatt Turnpike" connects approximately 10 per cent of the entire generating capacity of the nation's private utility industry.

Up Facilities

Not only has Meco increased its production of electricity but it has increased facilities in every part of its territory. The voltage of all distribution lines was doubled to provide larger amounts of power at higher "pressure" for each customer. Since 1950 Meco has added 6,678,769 feet of wire, 3,796 transformers and 9,544 poles to the local network which serves farms, shops, schools, factories and homes and it built 8,425 "services" from its lines to new customers.

"Greater use of electric power is the sign of a modern home and the successful industry, because it makes living more comfortable and work easier," Dreas said. "The fact that residents of the Middle Delaware Valley are using 87% more electricity than they did ten years ago is solid testimony to the growth and progressive spirit of this area. And Meco's substantial investment in new facilities is an indication of its belief that its customers will continue to use electricity in an ever increasing quantity in improving the economic future of the valley."

Star Shows Growth Over 3 Decades

STAR FURNITURE Store—Monroe County's largest furniture store, was founded over thirty years ago in the site of the present A&P in East Stroudsburg. From a little forty-foot building, it has experienced a steady growth over the years and is now located on Route 209, above Eagle Valley Corners, within the East Stroudsburg Boro limits. This area is the county's fastest growing and largest potential shopping and recreational area.

Star Furniture's owner, David Bernbaum, was one of the first to realize the potentiality of this area and had the foresight to move his long established business there. Plenty of free parking, ample browsing space, and other conveniences enjoyed by the shopping public are always available. Custom orders are invited and Star Furniture will store, free of charge, any furniture that does not require immediate delivery. Many future brides are taking advantage of this service. Further expansion of this already ladge edifice is being anticipated.

Star Furniture offers many other extras, that are not obtainable in other stores of its type. It handles both furniture and appliances, dozens of styles and models for immediate delivery. It also features a used furniture trade-in department. Over the years, thousands of area residents have traded their old unwanted items in on new modern furniture. In the same used department, the largest selection of coal-wood, and oil heaters in Pennsylvania can be found. This is a fact substantiated by factory representatives.

Used Appliances

Used appliances, reconditioned and guaranteed are another item that they have been famous for over the years. Of course, Star Furniture also carries a complete up to date line of bright new modern appliances and kitchen equipment.

Nationally known brands of living room, bedroom and dining room furniture are always carried in large quantities at this beautiful highway furniture store.

Outdoor and casual furniture for porch, patio and den is also featured at this Eagle Valley Corner site which also homes the Pocono's most unique and only miniature golf course. The Eagle Valley miniature golf center and its new companion partner to be unveiled this season, the Eagle Valley Baseball machine range.

THE RELIGIOUS tradition in Monroe County may be traced to the year 1742.

In that year Monroe County's first church was built. It was located about two miles from Shawnee. It housed a Dutch Reformed congregation.

Bell Confident Of Development

THE BELL Telephone Company of Pennsylvania looks forward with confidence to the continued development of the Pocono areas in the "Golden 60s" and will support that confidence with economic investment.

"We will again show our faith in the future of the Poconos by expanding our services and facilities," said Budd Van Horn, local Bell Telephone Company manager and a veteran businessman in the Stroudsburg area.

"A look into the future policies of the company is best obtained by first reviewing our accomplishments and investments in the past five to ten years," he adds. "From 1955 to 1959 our company invested almost four-and-a-half million dollars here. Of that total, $2-½ millions were spent in cutting over to a completely automatic dialing system.

Among First

"Stroudsburg area residents were among the first in the state to have Direct Distance Dialing to many points across the nation. Customers here can dial nationwide without recourse to operator assistance. This is one of 67 localities in the state enjoying this service. By the end of the year the telephone company hopes to have a total of 103 localities taking advantage of this opportunity."

Van Horn estimates that in 1960 and 1961 the Telephone Company will invest another $601,000 in the progressive and picturesque Pocono area to add more services for its customers.

The company can use its past decade of expansion as a good gauge for the future decade. In January 1950 there were 10,284 telephones in this nationally-known resort area. In January this year there were 17,619—almost double the number.

In 1950, 81.2 percent of Stroudsburg families had telephone service. In January this year the figure had grown to 85.7 percent. The company confidently expects to maintain, or better that rate of increase.

The continued expansion and development of telephone services and facilities in this area is in keeping with the statewide policy and plans of the Telephone Company as announced in the year-end statement of its president, W. D. Gillen.

Upward Trend

"The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania's planning for 1960 envisions a resumption of the vigorous trend upward in business conditions," he stated, "and we have planned a construction program calling for outlays of $119,000,000 or $470,000 for each business day of the year.

"The number of Bell telephones in service in the state reached a new high of 4,146,000 at the end of 1959," Gillen said. "This represents an increase of 177,000 telephones during the year and a growth rate of 4.5 percent.

Add 200,000

"During 1960, we expect to add 200,000 telephones, an increase of 13.6 percent over last year's gain," he said.

The Pocono area will play an important part in the expansion plans of Bell, and the ever-growing resort business along with other growth and development in beautiful Monroe County will contribute to bigger and improved telephone service.

Near Many Cities

MONROE COUNTY lies in the heart of the Pocono Mountains resort region. It is but a two hour drive from the cities of New York and Philadelphia; is fringed by smaller cities—Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Hazleton, Allentown, Bethlehem, and Easton; and has transportation facilities making it accessible to more distance points.

Biological Laboratories Progressed Through Years

THE BIOLOGICAL Laboratories of the National Drug Co. were founded in 1925, and have been located at Swiftwater, in Monroe County, for the past 35 years. During that period we have seen our line of biological products (vaccines and antitoxins) perfected and their use spread throughout the medical profession.

Here in the past decade we have watched the opening of new markets for our new biological products, the doubling of our plant facilities, through the addition of a number of new buildings and the renovation of others, and have seen our gross sales nearly doubled.

10th Organization

In 1956 the Vick Chemical Company acquired the outstanding stock of The National Drug Company, thus making it the tenth organization in the Vick Enterprise.

H. Smith Richardson, Jr., the 39 year old president of Vick, leading the organization's emphasis on a young management, has set a goal of "doubling of sales within the next five years." This goal has been set on the basis of the sales having doubled twice within the past decade. This aim has been instilled throughout the organization and we at Swiftwater are preparing to do our share.

Intensive efforts are being made to extend the sales of our products into new areas, both at home and abroad. This increase in our sales will result in increased production at Swiftwater, and will smooth out the bumps of Government contract work in our somewhat erratic production cycle and it will stabilize our employee group.

Protection

We at National are particularly interested in production against the "Common Cold." Numbers of new viruses have been isolated and studied by research workers during recent years.

The 1960's will bring a continuing program of expansion in both facilities and personnel to Swiftwater, as we strive to surpass Mr. Richardson's goal to double and redouble our sales during the coming decade.

8 Districts Near Goal Of New School

FORMED NOV. 2, 1956, the eight individual districts comprising the Pocono Mountain Joint School District have progressed sufficiently over the past four years to the point where ground will be broken soon for the long-sought Junior-Senior High School.

As with almost every other district in the county, the Mountain Jointure has a building program underway to give the students of that area much-needed educational facilities.

Cost of the program will be $2,300,000 which is the total of the bond issue recently authorized and sold for the district.

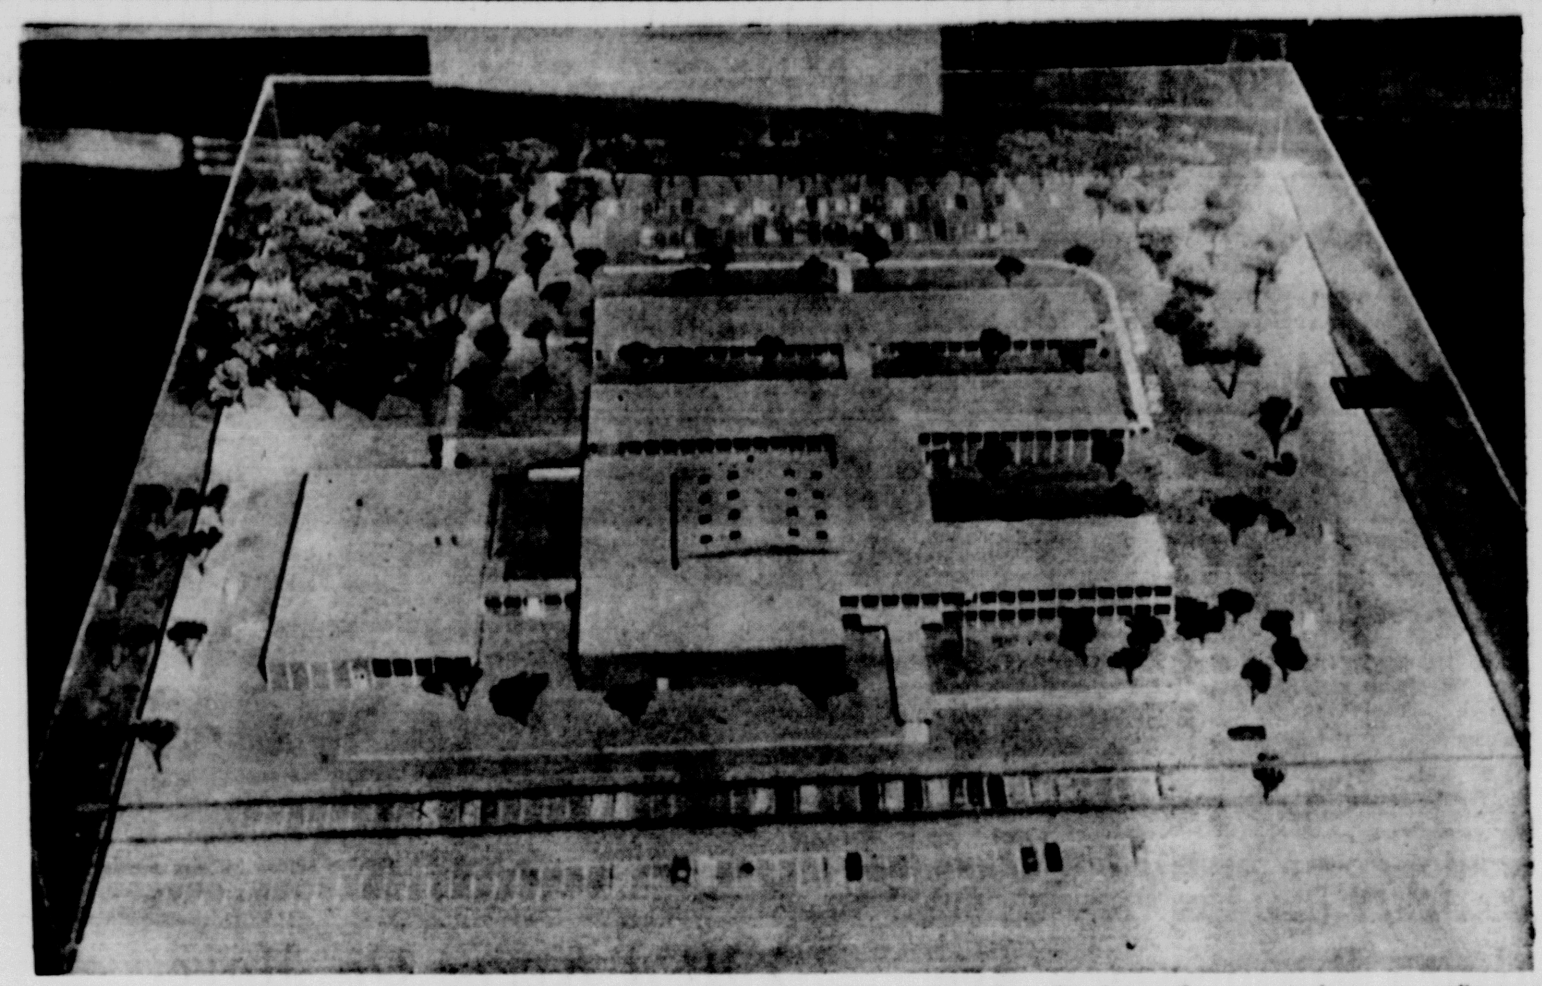
Districts in the Jointure are Mount Pocono Borough, Coolbaugh, Jackson, Pocono, Paradise, Tobyhanna and Tunkhannock townships.

Total Cost

Total cost of educating the 1,800 students in the Jointure last year was about $600,000.

This figure did not include the amount of rental for the building.

With the new building, plus additional costs of maintenance, the budget will rise, but education-wise, it is expected that a more rounded and better enriched program of studies will be available.



POCONO MOUNTAIN JOINTURE'S proposed junior-senior high school is shown in the above picture. The building will accomodate the educational needs of slightly over 1,000 students in all phases from agriculture to college preparatory courses. Cost of the school will be slightly over $2,000,000. Stroud Union Plans Future Renovations

FACED WITH the prospect of a steadily rising pupil enrollment, and limited facilities at the present time, the Stroud Union School District has announced the task for the future of building additions to several of the schools.

The elementary program is the most perilous as far as rising enrollments are concerned, but the twist lies in the fact that only two of the schools may need any kind of enlargement.

The Morey School needs an addition, the board was told by Superintendent Earl Groner, while the Hamilton school may also need improvements in the future.

The Arlington Heights building is another problem insofar as needed facilities are concerned for the future.

The present high school enrollment stands at 1,161 pupils, but Principal Alfred Munson reported that modifications within the existing limits of the building are needed rather than any sizable addition.

Munson predicts an enrollment in the coming year of almost 1,300, or more exactly about 1,275.

The elementary problem is slightly different in that with a smaller First Grade class entering last Fall, it was down eight students to a total of 1,742.

However, Principal Roger Dunning reported that the newest census figures gathered by his administration have not as yet been completed, and until the totals are known, the exact enrollment for the coming year is an unknown quantity.

The budget figure for last year was the largest in Monroe County. It was $1,130,445.

Finances, of course, will present a problem for the future, as with any district across the Commonwealth.

Hospital's Usefulness Is Cited

By Harry J. Smith
Monroe County General Hospital Superintendent

AT THE BEGINNING of a new decade, the General Hospital looks forward to increasing its usefulness to the community in several ways.

Although it is launching no specific 10-year plan, additions to its present services are contemplated and some of them will surely be realities before 1970.

A registered nurse's training program is a long range ambition, but the inauguration of a program to train practical nurses is close to realization.

This program would involve 16 weeks of pre-clinical training and 32 weeks of hospital training. During this second part of the training, the student would enjoy the benefits and part-pay of a regular employe, and at the end of the year's work, she would be eligible for state licensure.

Training Technicians

It may not be generally known that the hospital now has a program for training X-ray technicians. Fifteen persons have earned official registration in this field.

The clinical laboratory, too, trains non-registered technicians. There has been no demand for the type of training that leads to registration since its prerequisite is a college degree.

As for the medical staff, its most recent addition to the hospital service is the use of radioactive isotope diagnostic procedures. And its immediate subject of study concerns ways and means of providing more nearly complete round-the-clock coverage for both in-patients and out-patients.

Subject of Study

Chronic shortage of space in the hospital is the subject of study by several committees, medical and administrative. It is reasonable to expect that an enlargement of the physical plant will be among the new feature during the 60s.

Eastburg Businessmen Are Optimistic About Future

By David Bernbaum
President East Stroudsburg
Businessmen's Association

THE BUSINESSMEN of East Stroudsburg are looking to a bright era if progress continues during the Golden 60's.

The ever increasing facilities that are being forged in East Stroudsburg are a knock on the door of opportunity. Those of us who can visualize the horizon of the next decade will reap the harvest if they are alert and vigilant.

The three big projects that will form the productivity of East Stroudsburg are:

Offer Opportunity

The new East Stroudsburg public school, the sewerage system and the construction of the new Stroudsburg Thruway.

These projects will offer the following to East Stroudsburg:

The new public school will present, to the residents and to the families that relocate in East Stroudsburg, a modern plant with all the facilities and modern ideas of education.

The sewerage system will prove more conducive and beneficial and afford a better opportunity to industries to relocate in the area.

The Thruway will bring us tourists. With the building of such roads travel from the large cities will be reduced, not only in miles but in travel time. Some of the tourists will relocate in the area due to this cut in time and mileage.

In addition to this we have space available for the normal growth in industry and summer resorts.

More Planning

There is more planning being done for East Stroudsburg than the average citizen realizes. This planning will help make the next decade, the Golden 60's, an era of great progress for East Stroudsburg.

YMCA Keeps On Move, Steps Up All Programs

THE MOST stepped up athletic program for young and old is in high gear at the Stroudsburg YMCA and its counterpart at Barrett.

Basketball leagues for the midgets (8-12-year-olds), novices, semi-indoctrinated, fundamentally taught and huffers and puffers are in action daily at both places—both of whom are under the banner of the Monroe County YMCA.

The new "Y" building, Main St., Stroudsburg, has opened the doors to activity from the smallest to biggest of competitors.

Basketball

On the basketball side such circuits as the Senior, Industrial, Older Boys, Midgets, operate from Monday through Saturday.

Also a volleyball loop, designed for workers in industry is part of the everyday routine.

Enrollment Continues To Rise At ESSC

WHILE THE enrollment at the East Stroudsburg State College has not risen in the 15 years since World War II in any spectacular fashion, the change since the conflict's end has been influential to both the college and the community.

Now standing at a top of 1,126 students, down from 1,187 in the Fall semester, this number will increase by about 100 when the new Women's Dormitory presently near completion is opened.

Along with this new building will be the Science Building, and the Library-Administration Buildings, both also nearly finished.

Second Athletic Field

Although no date for the start of construction has been announced, a second athletic field and a service garage will also be built on campus in the near future.

Authorization for their construction has been given by the General State Authority, but the GSA has given no specific date for the start of either of the two projects.

The athletic field, it has been pointed out, will act much the same as classroom facilities to the college, since almost a third of the students are enrolled in the health education curriculum. The need for such a field has been stressed for some time by the administration.

Bids on th construction of the Special Education Building for the campus were opened recently, but they were thrown out by the GSA as being too high.

Such Special Education Buildings are to be constructed on all State College campuses as well as the Penn State University campus.

This is part of a program instituted by the Commonwealth to emphasize and increase the number of Special Education teachers in the State.

The present yearly cost of operation for the college is about $1,300,000. This is almost double the cost of a few years ago.

Enrollment by curriculum at the college shows 210 men and 148 women in the health education field, for a total of 368 students; 54 men and 248 women in the elementary curriculum for a total of 302, and 331 men and 107 women in secondary education for a total of 438 students.

Airport To Be Ready Soon

THE POCONO Mountains Airport, scheduled to be opened last October, is expected to be officially opened and dedicated early this Summer.

Unavailability of grading equipment, extra clearing work and 17 days of rain last Summer delayed opening of the renovated terminal, to which it is hoped to attract commercial airline flights.

H. R. Miller, Inc., of Lancaster is the contractor for the project.

Spring Work

H. E. Townsend, project engineer, told the airport authority that paving of the 4,000-foot runway and plane parking area and seeding of 34 acres of grass can be done in 45 days this Spring.

The delay in renovation of the airport was caused in part when a sub-contractor for primary grading work went bankrupt at a time when Miller's equipment was tied up on jobs elsewhere.

Power lines and telephone lines the suggestion of the Feedral Aviawill be placed underground at tion Authority. Cost is estimated at $23,000 for the power lines and $3,800 for the phone line, a saving of $2,000 over the cost of placing them above ground.

Little or No Delay

R. LeRoy Dengler, chairman of the airport authority, predicts little or no delay because of the underground installations.

Dengler is optimistic about securing commercial airline service for the terminal, despite a warning by Louis R. Inwood, who operates an airport advisory service in Philadelphia, that it is difficult to get airlines interested in a new airport.

While it may take a while, Dengler is confident commercial air service is only a year or two away.

All Roads Will Lead To Poconos

A NETWORK of four-lane, limited access highways leading to the Poconos from every direction is among the outlooks for the 1960s.

The Keystone Shortway and Penn-Can Highway, within the decade, will join the Pennsylvania Turnpike in channeling goods and visitors to this scenic resort area.

In addition, completion of the Stroudsburgs Thruway — designed to take through Route 611 traffic out of the business districts of Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg —is expected to enhance the twin borough's retail business.

First Phase Completed

First phase of the 611 by-pass is completed and work has begun on the final two phases. It will probably not be in operation for its full length until 1961, however.

The Stroudsburgs Thruway will also provide the terminus for the Penn-Can Highway, leading to New York State and Canada, and the Keystone Shortway, which will stretch from Stroudsburg to Sharon and the West.

Construction on both of these major highways is now underway. Completion dates are uncertain, but both are scheduled to be finished within the next 10 years.

Four-Lane Highway

In addition, a proposed four-lane highway across New Jersey from the George Washington Bridge will tie in with the area network at the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge near Delaware Water Gap.

What will be the results of this highway construction?

It is difficult to give a specific answer. But, to a man, civic leaders, businessmen, chambers of commerce and State Highways Dept. officials predict an ever-expanding resort industry as the area becomes more accessible.

Industrial growth is also forecast as the network of highways provides rapid, easy access to major cities of the East and Midwest.

Industrial Seekers

The Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce already has an industrial organization — Pocono Mountains Industries, Inc. — the activities of which are expected to expand in the future.

The golden 60s may indeed be golden for the Poconos.

Today's Hub In Trouble 50 Years Ago

THE POCONOS, now becoming the hub of major public highways linking East and West, North and South, had its problems 50 years ago.

At a March 17, 1910 meeting of the Monroe County Resort Assn. on Good Roads, it was reported by the Buckhill Co. that there were between 700 and 800 "thank-you-mams" between Cresco and Philadelphia. Buck Hill and Pocono Manor themselves contributed funds to build the road from Swiftwater to Cresco.

$2,000 A Mile

The state roads representative reported that even if the requested appropriation went through it would be absorbed in building a road from Scranton to Tobyhanna at the cost of $2,000 a mile.

He said that there were 98,000 miles of roads in Pennsylvania of which only 8,000 miles could be considered good roads. He advised local bond issues to build the roads needed in the county.

Training Area For Show Dogs

THE POCONO Mountains have developed into the breeding grounds of some of the leading show dogs in the United States in recent years. Several kennels have produced winners in some of the country's largest shows.

Mount Pocono also holds a show of its own each year, attracting entries from Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

New Junior-Senior High Nears Start

A NEW junior-senior high school with a capacity of 760 students is the major star in the horizon for the Pleasant Valley Joint School District.

With the completion of the project, the new building will end the present clumsy set-up of having two high schools — Chestnuthill High School at Brodheadsville, and Polk Township High at Kresgeville.

The new building, to cost $1,520,000, will contain all the modern needs of school buildings for the three districts in the jointure. They are Chestnuthill, Polk and Ross townships.

In addition to classrooms, the school will have a cafeteria, gymnasium, auditorium, administrative suite, band and music rooms, science laboratories, agricultural and industrial art shops, and a complete home economics living center.

While the budget for the past year totalled $238,775, Supervising Principal John Mills said next year's budget will necessarily have to be larger for at least two principal items.

Transportation costs for the entire jointure were not figured in this year's budget, but the separate districts handled their own costs. The budget to be instituted this year will, however, include all costs of transportation as well as regular items.

The second item not accounted for in the past, but an entirely new part of the budget will be the increased costs for maintenance and the starting of new classes at the new school building.

While the building will not be completed in time for the fall session of 1960, it is hoped by the Board of Directors and the school administration that the curriculum can be increased especially in the language department.

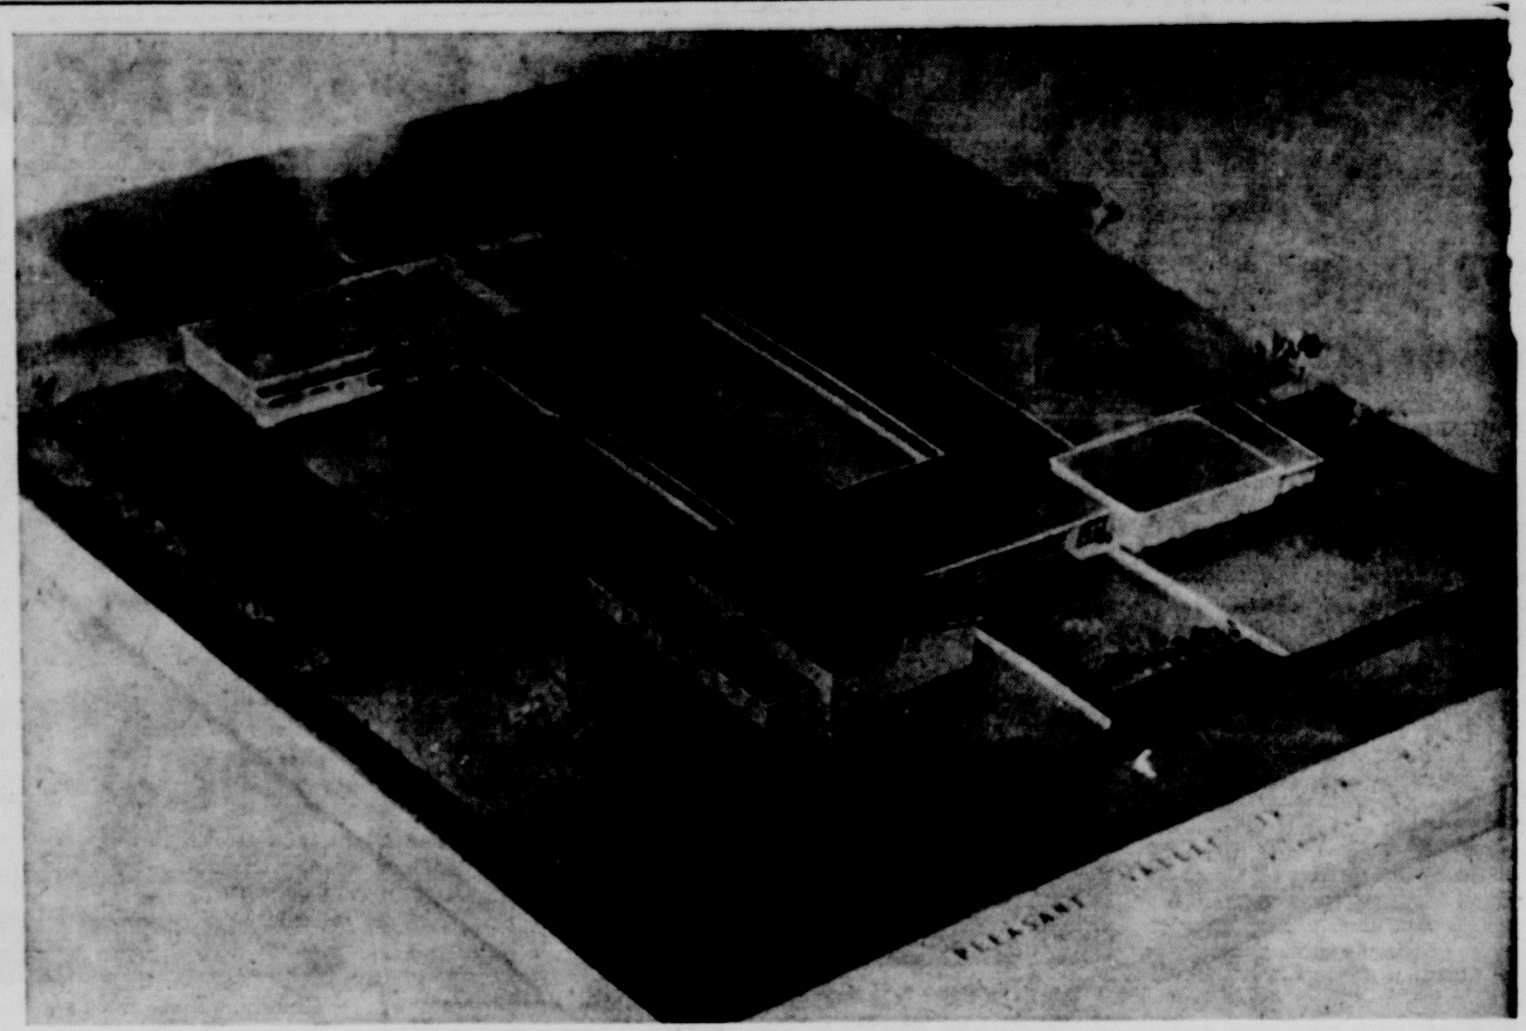
Near 1,000

The total number of pupils in the jointure at present has grown to almost 1,000.

But it was pointed out by Mills that when the school building is completed, students attending other high schools such as Pen Argyl, will be brought back to the Pleasant Valley School and this will increase the total number of pupils.

Twenty-nine teachers are now on the faculty of the jointure, but this number too, will grow in the future.

Altogether, the jointure, with its new building, can look forward to the "Golden 60s" with an increased sense of pride.



PLEASANT VALLEY JOINTURE will build the above building for their junior-senior high school. Site of the structure will be adjacent to the present Chestnuthill High School. The building will replace the Chestnuthill school and the Polk Township High School.

Retailers Foresee Increase In '60

RETAIL trade sailed through another banner year in 1959 but foreign trade encountered rough going.

Retailers look forward to further increases in 1960—at least in the first half. International business will be under pressure next year to sell more goods overseas and bring more dollars home as the flood of imports mounts.

Total retail sales for 1959 are estimated at $208,500,000,000, up four per cent from 1958. The increase would have been more substantial had it not been for the long steel strike.

Recovery from the 1957-58 recession started in the final quarter of 1958 and continued strong all through 1959.

Branch stores continued to pace the sales upturn in the department store classification.

An increasing number of cities experimented with downtown shopping malls as trade boosters but the year's experience failed to establish the future of the mall.

Demand for rehabilitation of downtown business centers increased and merchants spent millions remodeling their stores in an effort to stop the flight of buyers' dollars to suburban shopping centers.

Outlook for the first half of 1960 is for a two to three per cent sales increase. Possibilities of strikes in major industries cloud more advanced forecasts.

In the foreign trade field, exports fell below expectations and imports increased.

Consumer's Utopia Is Seen Within Next 15 Years

ACCORDING to experts who aren't afraid of going out on a golden bough, America will be a consumer's Utopia within 15 years.

That's the word from the Research Institute of America which bases its prediction on present population growth and current consumer trends. The Institute's findings are published in the current special issue of LIFE magazine devoted to "The Good Life."

By 1975 more Americans (230 million) will have more money (average national family income up from present $5,000 to $7,500) and more time to spend it (15 per cent fewer work-hours, 50 per cent more holidays).

Happy Conspiracy

There will be a happy conspiracy among industry, technology and salesmanship to make every American's life a good deal safer and lots easier. Take the following examples:

There will be every conceivable kind of electronic device to cook man's food faster, purify his air supply, diagnose the weather and of course his health.

If a man should fall sick in the midst of living his good life, he'll be repaired in short order by tiny, complex, self-powered human parts like synthetic hearts, kidneys and livers.

Rockets will whisk special delivery mail anywhere in the world and relay stations and orbiting space satellites will speed his radio messages on their way.

The American of 1975 will be a man on the go. On long hauls electronic guides will keep his sleek car on the road. If he feels like going on foot, moving sidewalks will help him glide around town. For foreign trips he'll have a choice between giant jet airliners shuttling across the world at 1,500 mph or giant oceanliners which will serve 6,000 passengers cafeteria-style meals and get to Europe in four days for just $50 fare (fifty). Along with regular commuter helicopters, the family helicopter will be as attainable as a fancy convertible is today.

With 45 per cent more young people and 25 per cent more old people than today, schools will be running on night and day schedules and spare-time pursuits will boom astronomically.

With more cash in their pockets and more time on their hands, Americans will turn to cultural diversions like painting and amateur theater, and hobbies as costly and complex as home astronomy or making stained glass.

And should all else fail the American of 1975 will be able to fall back on good old television which by then will be adapted to low-cost tape so that the viewer can choose his own program by slipping a taped show into his machine.

Hamill's Background 30 Years

SINCE March, 1958, Hamill's Paint Center was located at 136 S. Courtland St., East Stroudsburg. Now Hamill's have moved to larger and better quarters at 37 S. Courtland St.

Carl and Merritt Hamill are the operators and owners of the paint business that features Felton-Sibley Quality Paints as their main line.

30 Years

Carl Hamill is also in the painting, wall papering and decorating business and the two Hamill's represent over 30 years of experience in the paint line.

Their new store is located on the corner of Henry and S. Courtland Streets, conveniently located with fre parking to the rear of the store.

Along with Felton-Sibley Paint Products, Hamill's also carry U-G-L Rrylock products, Rust-O-Leum and almost anything related to the painting and wallpapering business.

Whiter Times Are Forecast For Area's Winter Sports

WINTER SPORTS, revived in the Poconos in the 50s, can look forward to even whiter times in the 60s, because of artificial snow and ice makers.

No longer are winter sports follower subjected to the whims of Mother Natures. When the good lady doesn't provide, a combination of piping, hoses, water and compressed air does the work.

Artificial snow makers operated under the proper climatic conditions, can produce four inches of snow an hour but the average output is about one inch.

Two Resorts

Only two area resorts, Buck Hill and Split Rock Lodge have the snow-makers but several other resorts are planning to obtain them.

The snow is made by forcing water and compressed air through a sprayer. The temperature must be below 30 degrees and the humidity below 60 per cent to produce powdery snow. If the conditions are not present a watery slush results.

Skiers favor the artificial snow. They say it provides a more uniform surface. But the big advantage is that it's available in a matter of hours.

Several resorts have built skating rinks where there are lakes available.

Flooded Parking Lot

A sizeable area, in one case a parking lot is enclosed so that water will not escape and flooded.

It takes about 15 applications of cold water with a final dousing of hot water to make a suitable skating surface. The hot water is used to rid the ice of bumps.

Ice fishing, tobogganing, and sledding have grown in popularity in the past 10 years in the area and Split Rock has added mile-a-minute thrills with its ice boats.

Ice Car Raving

In 1957 Ice Racing Enterprises began running sports car races on the ice at Lake Naomi.

In four years the off-beat races have attracted national attention and have been featured in magazines, network and foreign television and newsreels.

The races are run every Sunday on a two and one half mile track from early January to March.

Average 60 M.P.H.

Speeds of 115 miles and hour have been reached on the straightaways but the cars usually average about 60 miles an hour. The average speed record, held by Mrs. Alvina Ostrowski of Belleville, N. J., is nearly 80 m.p.h.

More than 18,000 people have watched the races this winter, which includes a four-hour endurance test.

The endurance runs are doubly tough because ice accumulation on the frame of the car changes the driving procedure with almost every lap.

Only three cars have ever turned over in the races. The lack of traction prevents the vehicles flipping and makes "spinning out" the big danger.

Wins Penny A Vote Contest

MISS LEILA Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Morgan, was crowned Queen of Old Home Week in Stroudsburg in 1910 gaining 11, 988 votes to Willita Morton's, 10,523 at a penny a vote.

She was crowned in a pageant from the Fulmer House to the band stand at Court House Square by Phoenix Fire Co. members in full uniform as an escort and Allison Everitt as her page.

Shull Crowned

Samuel E. Shull crowned the queen and presented her with the diamond ring which was her prize. The committee headed by Mrs. J. B. Williams now Mrs. A. A. Holbrook, reported that they had spent $80 for the ring, $2.50 for other expenses, and turned in the profits of more than $170.

This year, for the first time, golf lessons and a driving range were included in the well-organized plans of the Stroudsburg "Y".

Fewer Hours, More Money Outlook

YOU MAY work fewer hours, make more money, have more fun in the wonderful world of the 1960s.

That's how economists and businessmen view the future.

Their forecasts require, of course, a peaceful decade.

The Forecast

Given that, they foresee:

Nearly 81 million people employed by 1970. It's a little more than 65 million now.

A work week averaging about 37½ hours. It's a little more than 40 now.

A steady growth in wages with only a little more than 13 per cent of all households having an income of less than $3,000. It's 20 per cent today.

Prophecies are always hazardous. For example:

In October 1929, just before the Great Depression, the Harvard Economic Society concluded no serious recession was likely, and if there were, the Federal Reserve System would take steps to ease the money market and so check the movement.

Professor Irving Fisher of Yale, an eminent economist, said just before the stock price break and depression that stock prices had reached "what looks like a permanently high plateau."

So, a prudent man will take his predictions with a grain of salt.

Glowing Prospects

Nevertheless, men of business and finance are almost unanimous in glowing forecasts for the coming decade which already has been labeled the "Soaring Sixties," "Surging Sixties" and "Golden Sixties." But some see the expected period of climb interrupted by recessions.

The Committee for Economic Development says:

"If we conduct our economic affairs with intelligence, we can reach a general level of material well being higher than was ever before conceived of as possible."

Says Mills B. Lane, president of the Citizens & Southern National Bank, Atlanta, Ga., the Southeast's largest banking system:

"I expect the greatest 10 years we have ever had. There will be fluctuations, but I look for very strong forward progress. It will be a decade of terrific technological advance."

S. Clark Beise, president of the Bank of America, San Francisco:

"I share the widely held view that growing population, an expanding labor force, the great increase in family formation, and recent and prospective technological gains will favor general economic growth during the next 10 years."

Ernest B. Marsh, president of the Santa Fe Railroad: "My confidence in the future of American business and the system under which we operate is unbounded. The trends in growth of population and industry should by 1970 produce an economy that will cause all previous records of production and employment to appear insignificant by comparison."

Eastill Heyser Jr., president of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Assn., Dallas: "Oil and gas producers are betting billions of dollars annually that by 1970 American industry will be using approximately 1½ times as much energy as it is today.

Secretary of Commerce Frederick H. Mueller estimates the Gross National Product will hit 500 billion dollars by mid-1960.

The 1970 Story

The National Planning Assn. estimates that by 1970 the GNP will be 790 billion dollars in terms of the 1958 dollar. It's about 480 billion this year in this year's dollar, about 473 billion in the 1958 dollar.

Gerhard Cohn, chief economist of the National Planning Assn., expects the economic growth rate in the next 10 years to rise 4.2 per cent a year. It averaged 3 per cent in the 1951-59 period.

The Committee for Economic Development has figured out that, if the growth rate should average 4 per cent a year, average family income in 1975 would exceed $8,500, after taxes. If the rate is 3 per cent, the income would be $7,500, after taxes.

Automation and electronicc will provide a fabulous new world. Already an electronic brain is controlling a refining unit of Texaco at Port Arthur, Tex. It is now feasible to run a railroad train without any crew aboard.

Steel Prosperity

The steel industry expects to increase its capacity by 2½ million tons each year of the decade. Its big emphasis will be on foreign markets. Aluminum probably will expand even faster in view of its widening uses.

The automobile industry expects to sell 7½ million cars each year by 1970. This year's total was around 5,600,000.

If you think streets are crowded now with 58 million cars in use, wait for 1970 and 90 million cars. Gas turbine engines will appear in trucks but not in cars. There likely will be more passenger cars with engines in the rear.

The electric utility industry, which has been doubling in size every 8 or 10 years, is expected to do so again in the next decade.

The Bell System, which has 59 million telephones in use, expects to have 93 million by 1969.

214 Million People

There will be a lot more people around. Population will total 214 million with a civilian labor force of more than 83½ million by 1970. The National Assn. of Homebuilders expects to build 1,500,000 to 1,700,000 homes a year by the late 1960s.

Older folks will become an increasingly important part of the population. The number of new teen-agers will total four million each year until 1968, when it will jump to 4½ million.

Robert J. Lampman, University of Wisconsin economist, in a report for the Senate-House Economic Committee, forecasts a steady reduction in the number of low income individuals.

About 26 per cent of the nation was in the low income group in 1947. By 1957 this was down to 19 per cent. By 1977 Lampman expects the drop to continue to 10 or 12 per cent. In 30 years he expects poverty to be virtually eliminated.

Schoolboy Sports Programs To Build Up In Sixties

THE FUTURE holds a bright outlook for scholastic athletic programs in the Pocono Mountain area.

One modern plant is already in motion at Stroudsburg High and three other ulta-modern setups are practically in the making for East Stroudsburg Area Joint School, and Pocono Mountains and Paradise Valley Jointures.

East Stroudsburg is ready to build a new junior-senior high school which will include a first-rate gymnasium and a olympic-type swimming pool.

Two not-new jointures but with plans for new buildings are Pocono Mountains and Pleasant Valley. Both schools, when completed, will afford a three-fold sports schedule in baseball, basketball and football.

At the present, Pocono Mountains Jointure comprises four schools. The yare Pocono Twp. at Tannersville; Barrett at Canadensis; Tobyhanna at Pocono Lake; and Coolbaugh at Tobyhanna.

Currently the athletic setup at these four institutions comprises only baseball and basketball on a varsity and junior varsity basis.

Pleasant Valley

At Pleasant Valley the two high schools who will be engrossed in the new plan are Chestnuthill, of Brodheadsville, and Polk, of Kresgeville.

Like Pocono Mountains Jointure the Pleasant Valley group will include a first-class gymnasium in its makeup.

While all the plans on a full-scale athletic operation are still in the molding stage, inquiries on the possibility of adding wrestling and a girls sports program to the baseball, basketball and football setup have been undertaken.

Pocono Mountains and Pleasant Valley administrative and board members also have been looking into the feasibility of joining one of the official PIAA leagues—Lehigh-Northampton or Lehigh Valley—or laying the groundwork on a ne wcircuit, comprising East Stroudsburg and Stroudsburg, Bangor and Pen Argyl Highs.

The new gymnasium at Stroudsburg which opened the door to elementary basketball and gym workouts, is also included in the plans of East Stroudsburg and Pocono Mountains and Pleasant Valley groups.

While the new buildings are being built to afford better academic conditions for pupils and students, the far-sightedness of the board members at all three schools have assured sound athletic programs for the future.

Frisbie Planning Service Center

A COMPACT and complete building service center is planned for the 1960s by Frisbie Lumber Co., 355 Main St., Stroudsburg.

Its development, however, must wait until locations for flood control dikes are finally determined. Present plans indicate that most of the present yard will be needed.

The firm began at its present location as a mill and lumber company. The exact date of its founding is unknown, but history indicates it existed while Indians still roamed the area.

The firm has survived four floods, in 1841, 1842, 1869— when the Fifth St. dam broke—and 1955.

Six Former Owners

It has had six owners and came into the Frisbie family in 1902 when it took its current name. In 1948, R. F. Kistler, Inc., was formed with the present owner, Kistler, combining the firm's operations with that of the People's Coal Co.

Recovery from the 1955 flood was deliberately slowed until flood control projects were established.

'Gap' Setting For Movie

DELAWARE Water Gap was the setting for a moving picture made there in 1910 by the American Biograph Co. There were about 50 people and four fine horses in the company which arrived by special car.

The presence of the horses led to the theory that this was to be a Western picture with Indians. It later developed that it was a Civil War picture with Vernon Clarges, who toured with Joe Jefferson, in a leading role.

Up-To-Date Eastburg 'Ed' Plant

IT WAS JUST five decades ago this year, according to the Monroe Record of 1910, that the first East Stroudsburg High School was completed.

This year will see the completion of a new junior-senior high school for the Jointure that will be one of the most up-to-date buildings, in the educational line, in Northeastern Pennsylvania.

The combination brick and stone, multi-level building is on a tract next to the present high school building on North Courtland St. Present high school facilities were constructed in 1915, and the school building built in 1910 was turned into elementary facilities.

Other Additions

Additionally, the district is building additions to the Smithfield and Middle Smithfield Schools to accommodate the large influx of new pupils in those areas, plus the long-needed expansion program for the elementary schools as a whole.

Cost of the entire building program was underwritten with a bond issue totalling $3,330,000 for the jointure.

Not content merely with increasing buildings in the district the Joint Committee, headed by its president, Raymond Hartman, has been working hand-in-hand with supervising Principal Carl T. Secor to expand and enrich the curriculum as well.

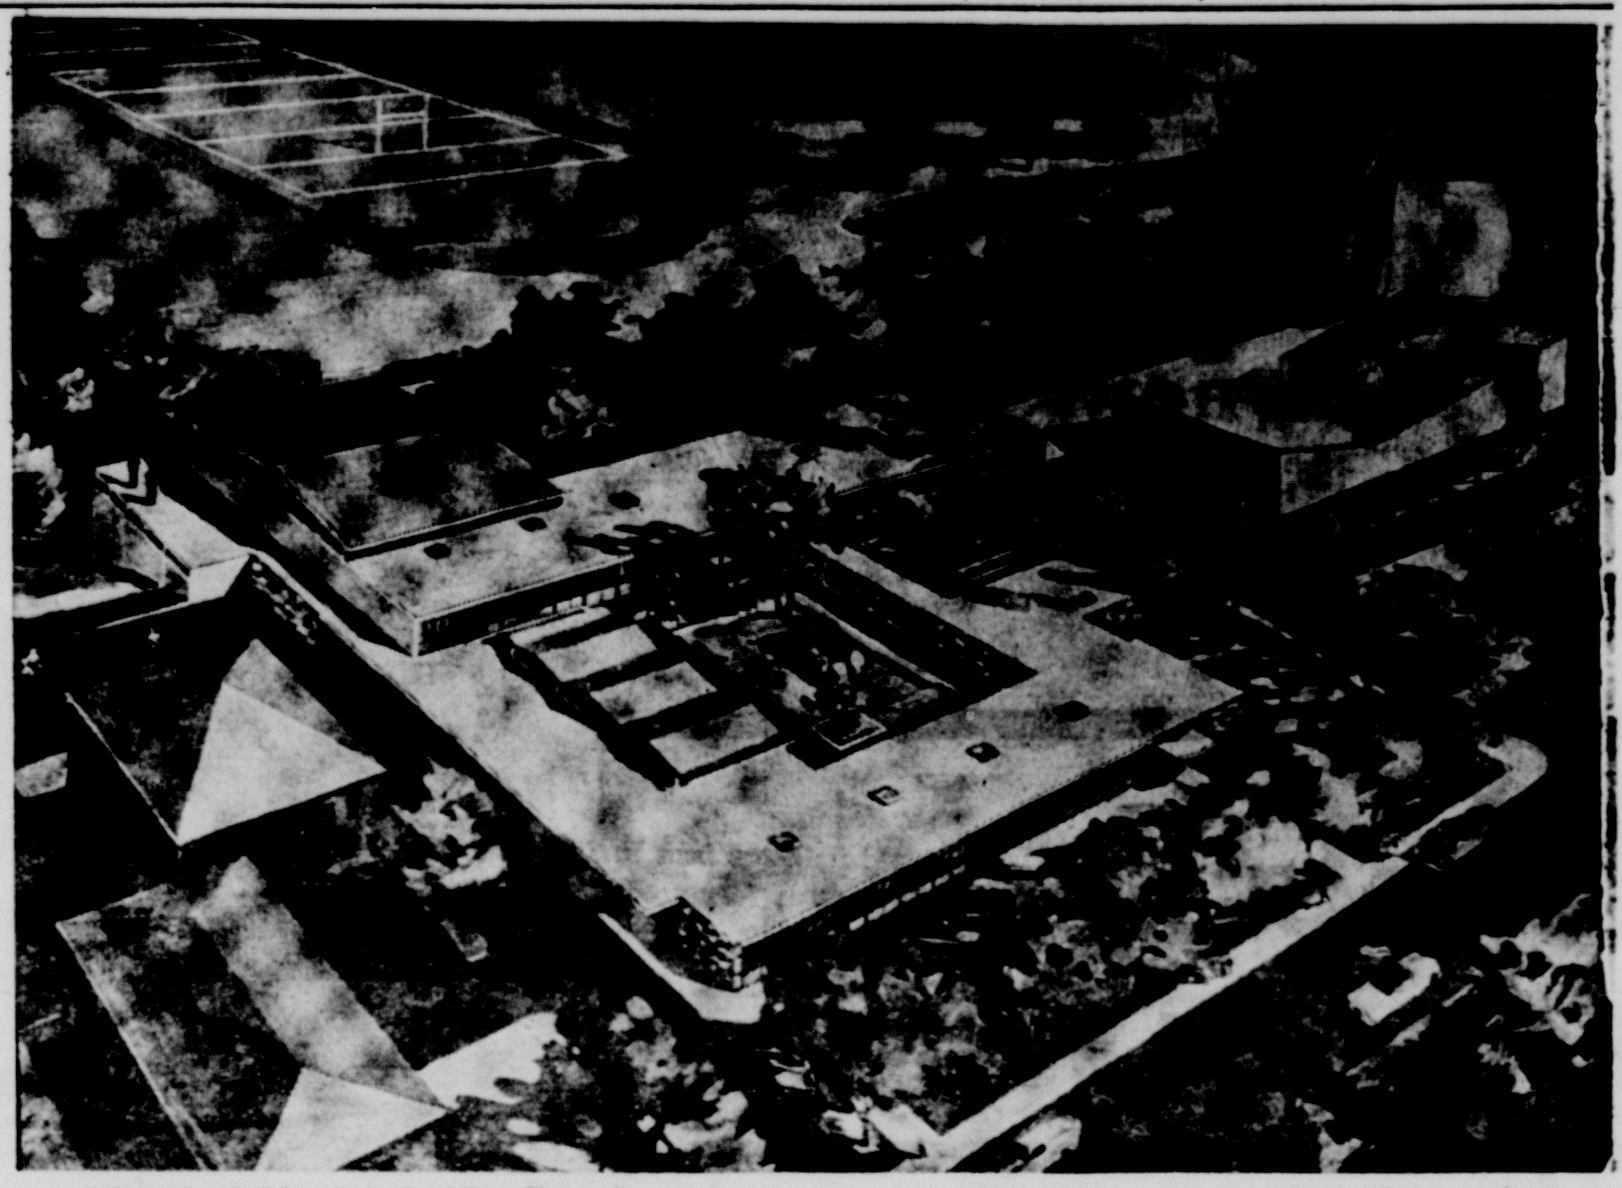
New language laboratories, with tape recorders, will be built into the new building to increase the number as well as the extent of foreign languages taught.

$866,285 Budget

The budget for the past year totalled $866,285 for the Jointure to instruct and transport its 2,100 students. Of these 1,000 are high school students and the remainder are elementary pupils.

There are presently 44 teachers on the High School faculty, and 36 teaching the elementary curriculum.

While the budget itself will rise next year, it is not expected that the cost of transportation will rise appreciably. The Jointure is paying $4,857 per month for the rental of 14 conveyances, in addition to the one bus owned by the district.



NEW JOINTURE HIGH SCHOOL—This is the artist's conception of the new East Stroudsburg Area Joint Junior-Senior High School. Built on the site adjacent to the present high school building, the new school will house the educational facilities for secondary students of the Jointure. It will open in September.

State 7th In Invasion Of Industry

PENNSYLVANIA ranks first in the nation on the basis of the number of major new plants reported during the past six months, according to "Industrial Development," a magazine listed as the national guide to industrial planning to expansion.

Donald V. Quinn, in an article in the February issue of "Industrial Development," says 79 new plants have been reported for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, with California second at 71.

Other states listed by the magazine in the top ten of states having outstanding records of industrial expansion are Massachusetts, Florida, Mississippi, North Carolina, Texas, Michigan, Tennessee, and Arkansas, in that order.

South-West

"Quinn's list of the ten leading states is made up predominately of southern and western states, an indication that Pennsylvania is more than holding its own among the Eastern states who are our real competitors," State Secretary of Commerce William R. Davlin, said in commenting on the magazine listings. Davlin attributes the fine record made by Pennsylvania to an "improved tax climate, plant financing by communities, banks and the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority, strong development organizations in localities, utilities, railroads and industrial realty firms.

"More and more industry is learning that the tax climate in Pennsylvania places the Commonwealth in a highly competitive situation when it comes to attracting new industry," Davlin added.

"Contributing to the Stroudsburgs Tradition of Healthful Living for 80 Years"

Flory Predicts Planting Records

THE YEAR 1960 will open a decade of nationwide landscaping and planting of trees and shrubs for beautification that will break all previous records, Jesse R. S. Flory of the Landscape Department at LaBar's Rhododendron Nursury predicts. Every year for the past ten years a new peak of planting has been experienced and the momentum is increasing.

Flory reports that the expanded rate of home-building has been a strong incentive for more planting and landscaping. Even more important than this, however, is the trend toward "outdoor living."

Throughout the Pocono Mountain area, as well as throughout the entire United States, homeowners have accepted the fact that family garden living creates a healthier, pleasanter way of life and also provides an outlet for creative energies. The creation of a garden-like atmosphere around the home has come to signify wholesome family pleasure, neighborhood prestige and a more natural way of life.

Even teen-agers are enjoying themselves through "patio parties" —a more sophisticated and mature version of the small fry cookout. Patios and gardens are fast becoming fun centers for the whole family.

Not Alone

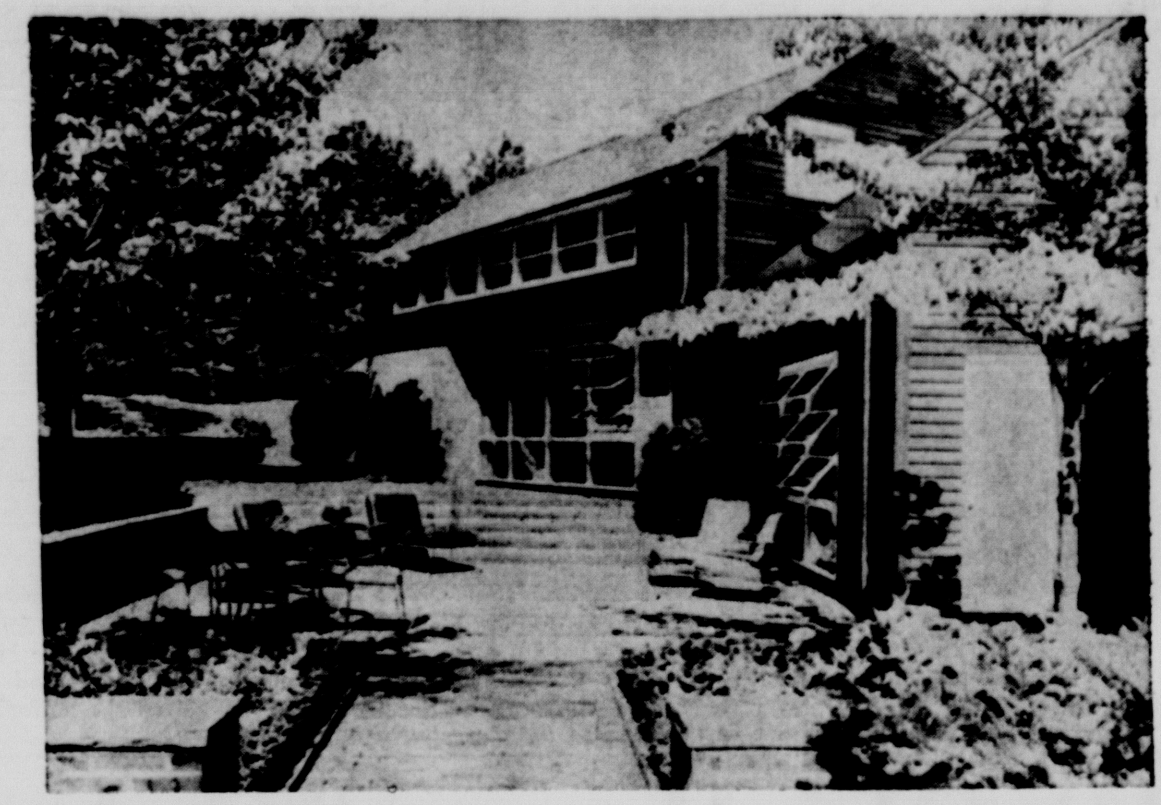
But home-owners are not alone in realizing the value of attractively planted properties. Factories, banks, utilities and stores are landscaping both outdoors and indoors for economic and aesthetic reasons. Good landscaping, they have found, is good business.

Employes take a greater interest in a job when surroundings are pleasant and planting is one of the most effective ways of beautifying industrial properties.

City planning today includes planting as a very important part of urban development. Many large cities have recently planted "malls" to the obvious delight of the population.

In the Pocono Mountain resort area, Flory predicts that planting will become increasingly important as resort owners, residents, stores and industries strive to maintain and re-create the natural beauty of our area.

"We truly believe that the "sixties" will see rapid strides taken in the beautification of our county and appropriate plantings will contribute more to this than any other activity," he said.



BEAUTIFICATION OF OUTSIDE of home is the theme of LaBar's Nursery for 1960.

East Stroudsburg Largest Borough

EAST STROUDSBURG was in a business boom in 1886, older records have shown.

During that year, more than 23 firms were in business including six general stores, two furniture stores, harness factory, glass factory, tannery, brewery, stove foundry and machine shop, three hotels, two drug stores and two lumber yards.

Labor Record Tops

LABOR'S record of participation in public affairs in the Stroudsburgs is outstanding. Headquarters are located in the CLU Social Club in East Stroudsburg. The Central Labor Union is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Preparing For "The Golden 60's"

'10 Old Home Week 60's Challenge

By Bobby Westbrook

THERE WAS a hot time in the old town—not just for one night but for one solid week—when Stroudsburg in 1910 celebrated the 100th anniversary of the laying out of the streets of the town by Daniel Stroud.

"The Old Home Week" held in Stroudsburg July 17 to 24, 1910, would be a challenge to any group planning a similar celebration for the 150th anniversary this year. Old-timers recall it as the highlight of their youth with the town "illuminated" with "flaming arcs and soft festoons" of lights from the Methodist Church to the Mansion House and from Seventh to the Court House Square.

There were parades every day, horse races or baseball games at the Fairgrounds every afternoon, and band concerts and the carnival in the Court of Honor on Seventh Street every night.

Dr. Brown's Father

The idea was first broached by Robert Brown, father of Dr. Robert Brown and then president of the First National Bank, at the annual banquet of the officials of Stroudsburg with the East town fathers as guests.

Another suggestion at the meeting also met with approval: the future consolidation of the boroughs. However it was suggested that consolidation should be approached with "careful consideration not rushed into pell-mell". Since, 50 years later consolidation has still not been achieved there was apparently little "pell" and even less "mell."

The Centennial idea fared better. R. B. Keller was named chairman. The newly organized Stroudsburg Board of Trade got behind the proposition, and through its committee enlisted the help of the East Stroudsburg Board of Trade, the "Patriotics" or POS of A companies of the county, the entire companies the churches and the women.

Permanent Quarters

Permanent headquarters were set up in the carpet room of Brown and Keller's Store and every night saw a meeting of one or more of the committees to work on what was finally officially titled "Old Home Week."

The Monroe Record supported the project editorially, calling attention to the fact that such a celebration would not only bring back many native sons and promote family reunions, but would also attract potential home seekers, manufacturers and summer people. The Monroe Co. Resort Assn., launching a drive for a Boom Monroe County and for Better Roads, agreed.

So, apparently did the 7,696 taxables, and 1,192 non-taxables which appeared on the county tax assessment rolls along with 2,201 dogs, 3,738 horses and 3,389 cows. Everybody got into the act.

There was a parade committee, an industrial committee, a historical committee, entertainment, public meeting committee, resort committee, publicity committee and decorating committee. And they all worked.

Financiers

The decorating committee had the task of deciding how to finance not only their part but the whole celebration. Costs of installing the lights, prizes, purses for the horse races, and other expenses of the celebration were met through a nightly carnival "with local talent only," through a contest for Queen of the Carnival with votes costing a penny a piece, and through sale of historical booklets at 25 cents each written by young Robert Brown, then a student at Columbia University.

R. B. Keller gave up all of his other work to concentrate on details of the celebration. The Lackawanna Railroad was induced to run special excursion trains. The tents of the Entremont Grove Camp Meeting at North Water Gap were loaned for the carnival and the home talent vaudeville show.

They arranged to have North Seventh Street closed to all traffic, the street supervisors agreed not to tear up any of the town streets. The burying grounds on Lower Main Street was cleared of weeds and brush and the Stroud gravestone cleaned. The sites of Fort Hamilton and Fort Penn were marked with banners.

Not So Common

The Centennial and historical aspects of the celebration may have been overshadowed by the parades, sporting events and carnival but as C. H. Crowe pointed out in the discussion about whether to call it the "Centennial of the Boroughs" or "Old Home Week."

"Everybody has a birthday except old maids but Old Home Weeks aren't so common."

At any rate the results were so uncommon that even 50 years later residents can recall the Baby Parade, band concerts and the lights that transformed the town.

Baby Parade Stole Spotlight

THE Baby Parade stole the parade show during Old Home Week in Stroudsburg in 1910, topping the Civic Parade, Fireman's Parade, and the Fantastic Parade, the last of which was practically rained out as paraders refused to risk their custumes to march in the muddy streets left by a severe storm.

The Baby Parade with 250 children was modeled on the big parades in Asbury Park. The parade was formed in front of the Methodist Church with quite a flurry trying to get all the babies tagged and the street cleared of carriages and automobiles.

Won Prizes

The parade marched to the Mansion House and back to the court house quare where the prizes were awarded.

Margaret Norris won the prize for the best decorated coach; Thelma Shaw for the smallest baby; Lewis Lee Tyreman for the fattest baby; Helen Kunkle, best decorated doll coach; best express wagon, Sarah Imporati, first, Anna Stem, second; fancy dress, Charlotte Hood and Frederick Dorman; bride, Ella Mae Archibald; groom, Harold Flagler; colored division, Mansfield Brooks; float, animal trainer, Marian Kistler; pony turnout, Billy Easton; bicycle, Howard Arbogast.

After that production, the other parades got scant attention in the press, although witnessed by large crowds. The Erie Car Shop float in the Civic and Industrial Parade made a caboose enroute from East Stroudsburg on the line of March, and took the prize for the largest body of men. The Best uniformed and best drilled prize went to St. John's Commandery; the best drilled boys to the Boys Brigade of Stroudsburg.

Old Hand Engine

The Fireman's Parade drew fire companies from neighboring communities. The Acmes featured among their equipment an old engine brought over from England in 1837; The Phoenix Company, oldest in line, wore natty fatigue uniforms and the Stroudsburg Chemical Co. came out in new white uniforms.

A proposed auto parade was cancelled because there were not enough automobiles available, and the Fantastic Parade drew a large crowd but few participants because of the muddy roads.

Era Of Oratorical Expert Brought Forth

THE Public Meetings which marked Old Home Week celebration in Stroudsburg in 1910 brought forth a full flourish of the oratory and rhetoric of the era, and the official opening of the ceremonies were marked by the blowing of fire whistles, the ringing of church bells, and almost lost in the clamor, the tone of the original bell which hung in the first Court House then hanging on special stand at the Indian Queen Hotel.

On the platform was the oldest known resident of the town, Daniel Dreher, former member of the council, to be born in the town limits. Samuel V. Dreher, chief burgess, threw open the gates of the town. Judge C. B. Staples, president judge of the local court, and Hon. Henry F. Walton, of Philadelphia, a native son, were among the speakers, recalling the days of their boyhood.

Father of Daniel

Walton dwelt particularly on Jacob Stroud, father of Daniel, telling of his participation in the battle of Fort William Henry, made famous by James Fenimore Cooper's "Last Mohican," and in the battle on the Plains of Abraham when he was one of the soldiers to carry the wounded Gen. Wolf from the field of battle.

Stroud also served on the Colonial Assembly and the first Constitutional Convention for Pennsylvania, he reported.

The official opening of Old Home Week on Monday was almost overshadowed by the events of Sunday. Special services were held in all churches and the Hon. A. Mitchell Palmer, Congressman from this district, was the chief speaker at a mass meeting at 4 o'clock.

R. B. Keller, general chairman of the Old Home Week celebration, was ill and unable to be present for the opening, although his original poem, referring to landmarks of his boyhood, was read. A. A. Dinsmore, a former superintendent of schools in Monroe County, of Philadelphia, was another speaker.

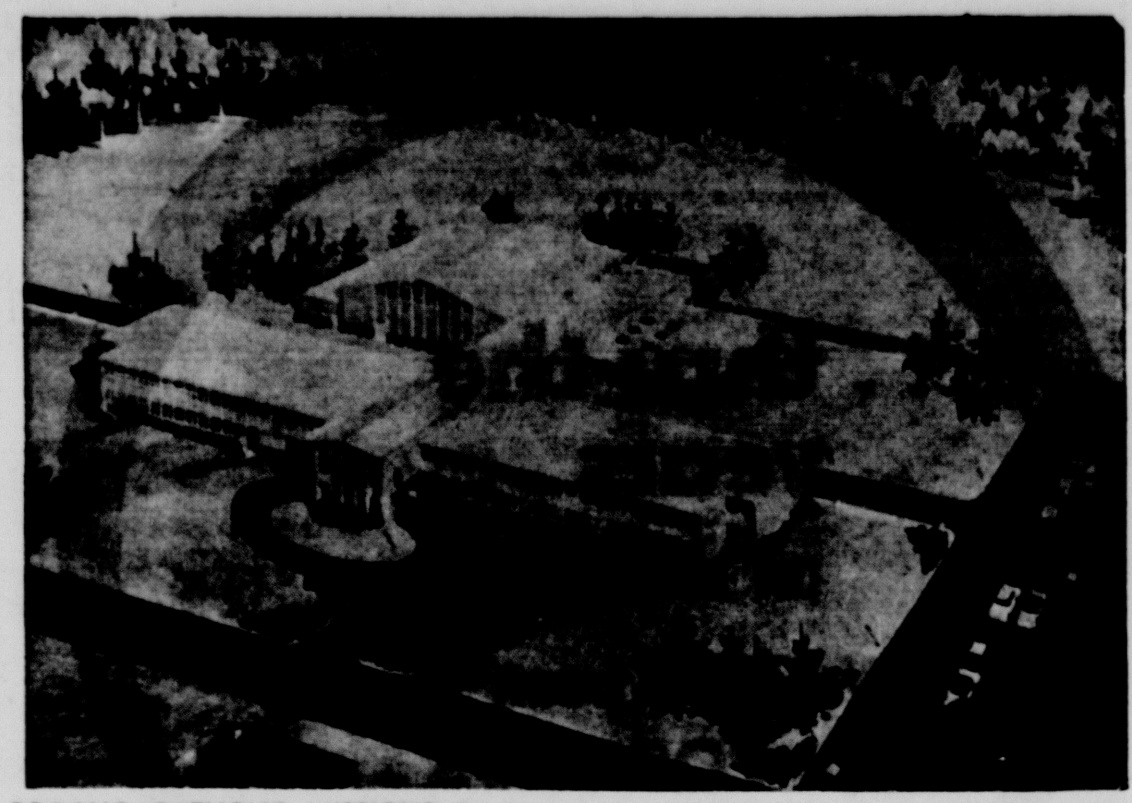
Catholic School Plans Complete



POCONO CATHOLIC MISSIONS Grade and High School which is being built in Paradise Township, three miles south of Mt. Pocono. This is one of four new educational plants being constructed in the area.

RT. REV. Msgr. C. A. McHugh, P. A., V. P., Pastor of The Pocono Catholic Missions, Mt. Pocono, Pa. announce that plans are complete for the construction of a new educational plant.

This new project consists of a Convent, Elementary and High School, built on a 32 acre site in Paradise Township, three miles southeast of Mount Pocono. The Architects are Valverde and Franco of Scranton, Pa. Monsignor McHugh is assisted by Rev. E. Robert Galligan and Rev. William F. Cusick.

The Convent has twenty private rooms, Chapel, two music instruction rooms, two visiting parlors, community room, dining room, kitchen, recreational lounge and library.

An ingeniously designed school building accommodates an elementary school as well as a high school by placing the facilities to be used mutually in the center. This serves to separate the students and simultaneously economizes in the areas needed by both groups.

In the center there is the administrative suite, principal's office, guidance department, priest's lounge, medical-dental examining and therapy suite, library and student chapel. The chapel will be completely furnished to accommodate 75 students for mass, confessions and visits to the Blessed Sacrament.

Immediately in back of the altar, there is a large stained glass window depicting the Christ Child teaching in the Temple, with Mary and Joseph entering in Search of Him. This window symbolizes the objective and theme of the school, that is, the imitation of Christ in His love for knowledge and obedience. For this reason, the window fronts directly in the middle of the building and is illuminated to offer inspiration at night as well as day.

Finest Of Courses

Both schools are designed to offer the finest courses to insure highest state accreditation. The elementary school consists of ten classrooms, book storage and toilet facilities. Four rooms are specially designed for the primary classes, complete with their own entrances, exits, and toilet facilities.

The high school consists of four home rooms, an elevated lecture room, Science Department, Business Department, Home Economics Department, and Art Room. In the science section there are separate and fully equipped rooms for biology and chemistry-physics. Adjaining is a photographic laboratory with processing equipment and work tables.

In the business department, there is a typewriting room with provision for electrical machines, a stenographic room and a business machines room with a wide variety of machines used in the business world. Provision is made here to enable the students to produce their own newspaper, dance programs, etc.

Separate Areas

The Home Economics section will have separate areas for the teaching of family living, food selection and preparation, clothing construction and design. This is equipped with gas and electric ranges, refrigerators, washers, dryers, sewing machines, and a grooming center.

An outstanding feature of the new school is the inclusion of a television system which consists of a projection studio and outlets in every room to handle closed circuit and regular television. The system enables the teachers to use the latest electronic techniques in education.

There is also a central-control dual channel sound system permitting inter-communication between the central office and all areas of the school. An emergency lighting and fire alarm system protect the buildings.

A concourse joins the classroom section to the area which has the auditorium-gymnasium, cafeteria, kitchen, faculty dining lounges, music instruction department, athletic department, snack bar, and shower-locker rooms.

Double-Fold

The auditorium-gymnasium includes a large stage with cyclorama and theatre lighting, three basketball courts, two of which can be used for biddy basketball, volley ball and badminton courts. Fifteen hundreds will be seated for a stage production and one thousand spectators at a basketball game. Shower-locker rooms are at ground level with entrances to outdoor athletics as well as to the gym.

Three hundred children will be accommodated in the cafeteria, which affords a view of mountain scenery through a glass wall. The cafeteria-kitchen cannot be more fully equipped to guarantee efficiency and quality in hot food service.

Children will enter and leave buses under canopies between the two main buildings. An unusual feature to insure smooth traffic is a driveway through the concurse immediately under the library. This also will provide inside shelter for handling the children or adults attending special events in poor weather.

The structure is steel, concrete, brick and extruded aluminum. The finishes are vinyl-asbestos and asphalt tile, painted concrete block, ceramic mosaic and wood paneling.

Plumbing Features

A deep well pump, copper tubing, and a sewage treatment plant are the main plumbing features. The heating system is circulating hot water provided by two oil-fired boilers burning number four or five oil. Unit ventilators are provided in all class rooms.

The general contract has been awarded to H. E. Stoudt of Allentown. Walsh Brothers of Pittston, received the heating-ventilating contract. The plumbing will be done by H. C. Archibald Co. of Stroudsburg. W. S. Hammerman of Scranton will do the electrical work.

A sewage treatment plant will be constructed by A. N. Bugbee of Catasauqua. Some $70,000 will be used to purchase permanently fixed equipment.

This is a total cost of $1,529,-171.00. The estimated cost of the convent is $271,775.00. The estimated cost of the school is $1,257,396.-00. Convent square foot cost is $19.80 and the school square foot cost is $18.16.

The elementary school will accommodate 500 pupils and the high school 440 students for a total of 940 enrollment. Facilities, such as plumbing, are also provided for a future expansion at a minimum expense to accommodate 400 more students. The cost per pupil is $1,-337.45.

More has been started and will take about one year to complete.

Slight Dip In House Building Seen

IT GOT pretty expensive to borrow money to buy homes in 1959 but people kept right on borrowing and buying anyway.

Money isn't likely to become any cheaper next year. The experts figure tight money will cause a reduction in new home building. But not a very big reduction.

As 1959 drew to a close, interest rates on conventional home mortgages—loans not guaranteed or insured by the government—crossed the six per cent level on a national average.

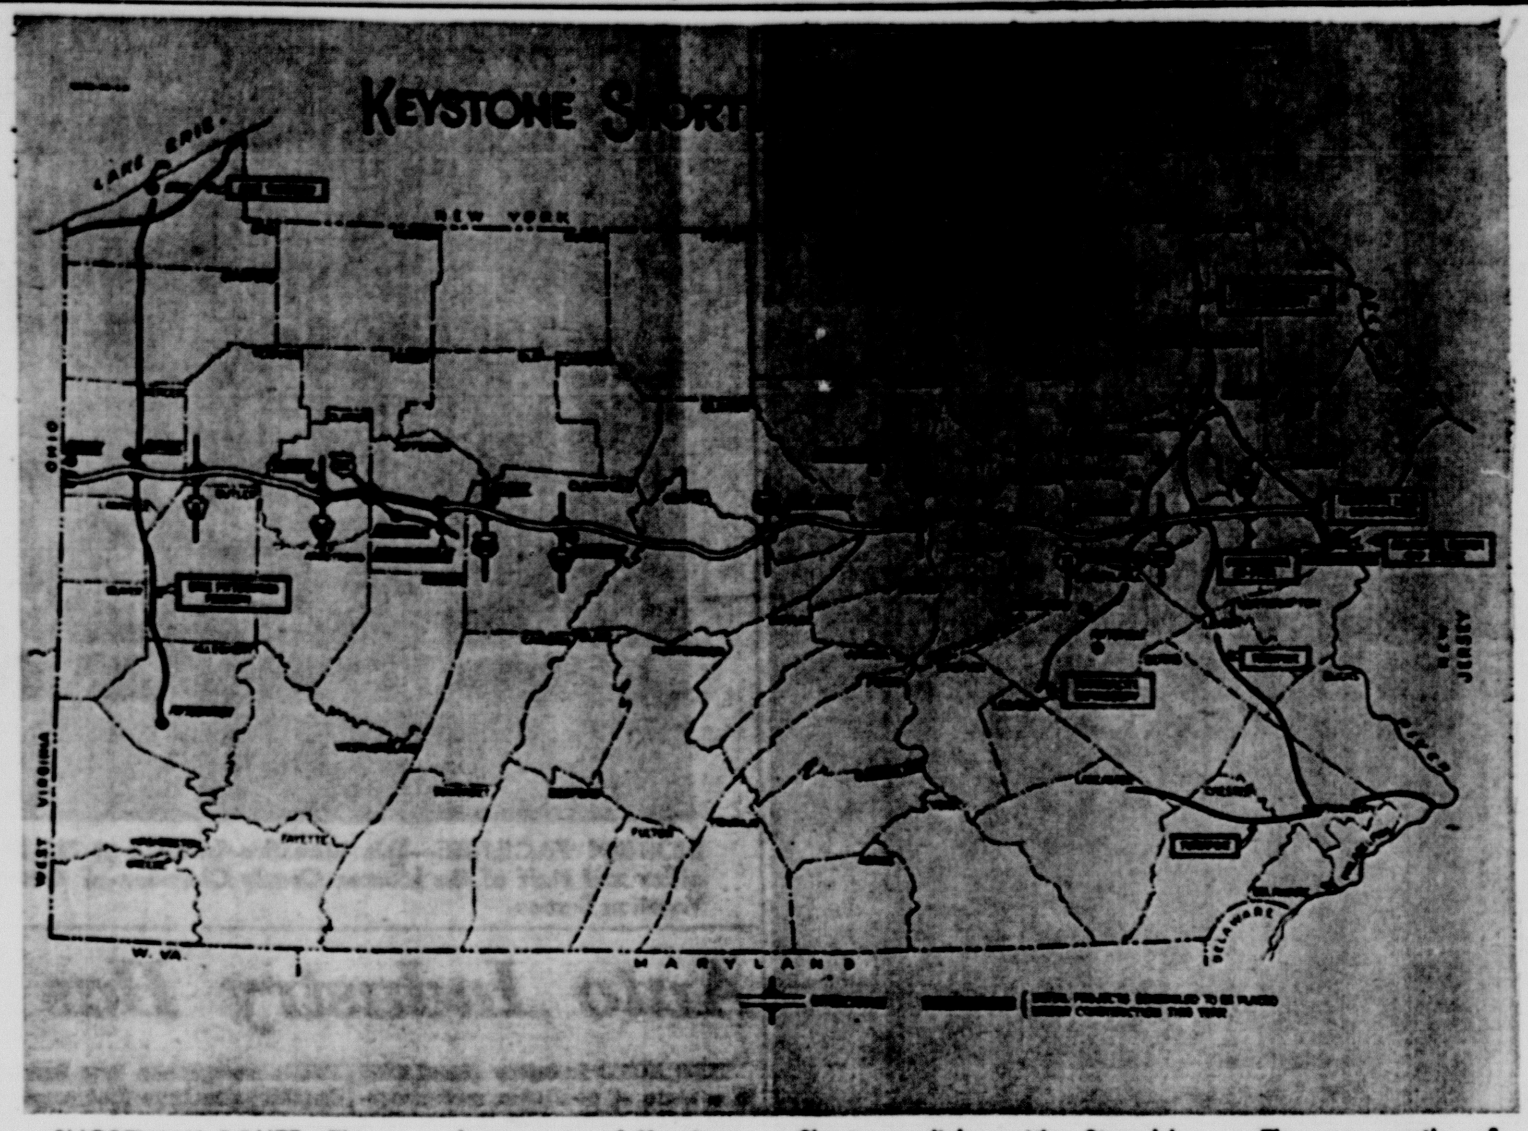
Relatively Cheaper

Relatively, it was cheaper to borrow money to buy homes in the northeast than anywhere else, according to Federal Housing Administration figures. If you wanted a home on the Pacific coast, you paid more than other people to borrow money.

Despite, this, 1959 probably was the second largest home building year in history. More homes were built, particularly during the spring and early summer, than had been expected. The rate fell off in the autumn.

As the year drew to a close Norman Mason, housing administrator, said "private home building this year is almost certain to exceed 1,300,000 units." The record was 1,352,000 units this year.

The experts believe public and private housing starts in 1960 will slump to between 1,250,000 and 1,275,000 units.



SHORTWAY ROUTE—This map shows route of Keystone Shortway which, when completed, will provide the Stroudsburgs and the Poconos a direct, limited-access highway connecting with the Ohio Turnpike and the West. Limestone, Clay Found In Area

MINERAL resources around the Stroudsburgs are limestone, clay, shale, sand and gravel. Onondaga and Helderberg limestone occur in the extreme southeast border.

In recent years they have been used for crushed stone for highways, concrete structures and riprap. Sandstone is abundant and suitable for building stone and soft shales could be used for making brick.

Excellent clay suitable for whitening Portland cement has been mined extensively in a region to the west and near the Stroudsburgs. The supply of sand and gravel is abundant and widely distributed.

Auto Industry Has High Hopes

THE AUTO industry closed 1959 in a state of confusion and uncertainty, but with high hopes of a bright new year.

Sales and earnings boomed from the recession levels of 1958 only to nosedive in the final two months from effects of the prolonged steel strike.

General Motors was forced into idleness for the best part of six weeks by a lack of steel. Chrysler suffered, and to a lesser extent Ford. Assembly of new cars was cut by 50 per cent and more through November. Dealers ran short and began demanding full list price for the cars they were able to get.

3 Small Cars

Three new, smaller American cars were introduced in October—the Corvair, Falcon and Valiant. Public acceptance was immediate despite price tags that more often neared $2,500 than the original $2,000 target.

The effect of the new compacts on the auto market as a whole still was in doubt as the year ends. Because of shortages there has been no true test of the public's desires.

Industry executives predict domestic sales of above seven million cars in 1960 including about 500,000 imports. Sales for 1959 will come to about six millions including some 600,000 imports.

Automotive News estimates total 1959 calendar year production at slightly more than 5½ million cars. In 1958 the total was 4,242,045. For the 1959 model year production reached 5,567,128 cars.

Chevrolet led Ford in the sales race on 1959 models by less than 20,000. For the calendar year Ford appeared a winner over Chevrolet. This was in part attributed to the shutdown of Chevrolet production in November while Ford continued to build, although at reduced rates.

It became evident in December 1958 that the public once again was interested in buying cars. Production that month surpassed any month since early 1957 and it continued at peak rates into 1959.

Inventories Mount

Inventories of unsold new cars mounted even though sales were good. The industry was trying to beat the predicted steel strike in two ways—by building a huge stock of cars and by building record supplies of steel to carry production through any strike.

Centennial Court Of Honor Transformed 'Seventh'

A COURT of Honor transformed North Seventh Street during the centennial "Old Home Week" celebration in Stroudsburg in 1910. Pillars were set up in the street itself, which Daniel Stroud in his original plans had intended for a town square similar to those in New England.

The square was illumined and booths set up along the sides from Main to the Court House. A band stand was erected at Seventh and Main where the Stroudsburg band under the direction of Sherman Rockefeller opened the carnival each night at 7.

Confetti Shower

Confetti covered the streets and the antics of the young Bell Telephone linemen enlivened the crowds with feather ticklers adding to the laughter. However, the young ladies circulating through the crowds selling home roasted peanuts complained about the "paper slappers" with bruises to prove it.

The paper flower booth by the Chemical Fire Co. was the prettiest booth even though they had to divide it so the fire apparatus could be brought out if necessary. The sale of historical booklets at 25 cents a piece, soft drinks and drinks from the local breweries, souvenirs, including hats, the cigar booth, and the fish pond and homemade candy booth brought in enough revenue to defray the cost of decorating for the celebration.

In the tent vaudeville shows by local talent featured the showing of slides, vocal solos and choral groups. The only complaint was that the noise of the merrymakers outside and of the two bands which spelled each other made it difficult to hear what went on.

It rained one day during the week turning the Court of Honor into a sea of mud but shavings and sawdust from the Erie Car Shops kept the celebrants from sinking too deep.

ELECTRIC HEAT

...the Big News in 1959!

The year 1959 saw the latest use of electricity—space heating—gain acceptance as the most modern method of heating.

Now, at the beginning of 1960, more than 600 electrically heated homes have been built or are under construction in the Meco area, and by the end of the year it is estimated there will be well over 1,000. In addition, thre are 90 commercial and industrial establishments using electricity as the sole means of heating.

The reason? Because electric heat requires no furnace, no flu, no space-robbing ducts, pipes, fuel storage bins or tanks. Each room has its own thermostat so that you get exactly the heat you want. There will never be any smoke, fumes or ashes to make dirt or work. It is the fuel of the future—here today. Comparing it to other fuels is much like comparing the electric light to oil lamps.

To supply the electricity needed for electrically heated homes—as well as for new industries, expanding present industries, modernized and new commercial establishments and improved farming techniques—requires that your electric company maintains a constant building program. Residents of the Middle Delaware Valley are using 87 per cent more eletricity than they did ten years ago. In the coming decade, the "Golden '60's," Metropolitan Edison Company will spend approximately $100,000,000 for new electrical facilities in this area.
